—BY ARTHUR BRISBANE—

AMAZING in its tone of command is Mussolini's statement concerning his power. Louis the Fourteenth with his "L'etat c'est moi," "the state is myself," was not more absolute. To the statement by the Vatican that education of children should be controlled by the church, Mussolini replies:

"I wish that there be religion throughout the country. Children may be taught their catechism. I will send them to communion in a body on Sunday, in their balilla (fascisti) uniforms, or otherwise. [illegible] that I let the priests [illegible] that's religion.

"The rest is politics, and politics [illegible] is I. I will not admit that anybody, absolutely anybody, touch that which belongs to the state. Everything within the state, nothing outside the state, nothing against the state."

• • •

MUSSOLINI goes on to say that [illegible], assuming that he is old enough to learn, belongs to the [illegible] alone. No sharing is possible, and "religion needs the support of that authority which comes from us alone."

[illegible] must bow to Fascism. Mussolini says: "We do not admit attacks upon the regime, or even a discussion of it."

Mussolini says that the Fascists in their private meetings "discuss [illegible] but at a certain moment I say 'The case has been heard,' and the discussion ceases. I then decide and everybody obeys.'"

That is what you might call "absolute rule."

You must go far back in history to match it.

CAPITALISTS shivering at the mention of Russia, like a little boy who dreads a bear on the dark staircase, will be glad to hear that Stalin has given up his "world revolution idea." He wants to put Russia's industries, her five-year and her 10-year-plans, in good order first.

At her present rate Russia will achieve gigantic industrial success, and great wealth will come with it. And Russians, from the top down, will be surprised to find what effect great wealth can have on extreme radicalism.

To make a man conservative, make him rich.

• • •

BY THE WAY, the Russians in their enterprises have distinguished partners. The General Motors, Ford and other American companies have been sending engineers, machinery and extending credit.

Now Richard B. Mellon, brother of the secretary of the treasury, is interested in the building of Magnitogorsk, the third largest steel mill in the world.

Nothing succeeds like success, and it attracts successful men to it, in Moscow, Timbuctoo, or at the corner of Broad and Wall streets, New York.

SOME BUSINESS NEWS: Everybody seems to share in the depression. For the first time in four and a half years, Wall Street sold fewer than 1,000,000 shares last Wednesday, and seat on the exchange sold for $200,000. Think of that, a seat that would have been worth three times as much a little while ago, when the price was on the way to $1,000,000.

The price will come. The crop of lambs is maturing.

OHIO CIGARET TAX FORECAST AS CERTAINTY

Bill Passed by Senate To Get Needed Revenue for Balanced Budget.

APPROPRIATIONS SET

House Votes $66,537,415 for Biennium; Salaries Cut, Jobs Eliminated.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., June 19—Enactment by the Ohio legislature of a cigaret tax was generally considered a certainty today as a result of the senate's action yesterday in passing the measure, and the house action in adding $1,000,000 to the biennial budget.

The cigaret bill, which proposes a tax of one cent on each 10 cigarets, now is before the house, while the budget measure with the added million will be before the senate Monday.

Called "Absolute Necessity

The increased revenue from the cigaret tax, estimated at between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 for the remaining 16 months of the biennium, was declared to be an "absolute necessity" in the senate, to help balance the budget. The addition of the $1,000,000 to the budget makes necessity for additional revenue even greater.

The house, with the budget out of the way, will be able to start the final week of the session by consideration of the cigaret tax and other taxation measures which the senate has approved and forwarded to the lower branch. The list includes a proposed $7,500,000 bond issue to be submitted to the voters at the November election, the proceeds from which is to finance a welfare department extension and betterment program over a number of years. This was passed unanimously by the senate yesterday.

Emergency Bill Approved

The senate likewise approved the Hyre bill which provides emergency remedy through issuance of bonds for taxing districts in financial distress because of poor tax collections. In districts where the tax delinquency is more than one-third of the total tax levied, bonds may be issued under certain other restrictions to make up part of the deficit.

The cigaret tax bill would not become effective until September. Dealers would pay the stamp tax and be liable to penalties for evasion. The purchaser would not be subject to prosecution for possessing cigarets on which the tax had not been paid. All other forms of tobacco would be exempted from the tax and those who "roll their own" will evade the tax.

Appropriation Fixed

The state government has been authorized by the house of representatives to spend approximately $66,537,415 for operating purposes during the remainder of this biennium.

The general appropriations bill passed the house last night, 98 to 10.

The budget is greatly in excess of estimated receipts of $58,000,000 but is still about $8,000,000 under the sum which the last administration had to spend. The business depression is held responsible for the decreased receipts and the resulting reduction of appropriations.

As it stands the measure provides for a 10 per cent reduction in the maintenance costs of all state departments; a 10 per cent reduction in the salaries of employes at all state educational institutions; a curtailment of building programs; and a retrenchment in the operating expenses of the various state parks.

A number of jobs in the departments of health, education and agriculture have been eliminated.

COURT ERROR FREES LUNATIC IN CHICAGO

Police Squads Search for Dangerous Madman; Home of Wife Guarded.

By United Press

CHICAGO, June 19—Freed from jail through the error of a newly appointed court clerk, a man who had been branded officially as a "dangerous lunatic" roamed at large today while police deployed in search of him and stood guard over the home of the wife whom he once almost beat to death.

The man, Michael O'Neill, 44, was released Tuesday from the county jail but it was not made public until today that he was free.

O'Neill was arrested March 26 after beating his wife unconscious with a mallet. He was turned over to the new "behavior clinic" where doctors pronounced him a "dangerous lunatic with homicidal tendencies."

Upon the report of the clinic, a jury ordered O'Neill sent to an asylum. According to routine, this meant dropping criminal charges against him with the understanding they be reinstated should he again become sane.

A newly appointed court clerk who was not familiar with this routine, sent the order for O'Neill's release to the county jail, but waited a half hour to send the [illegible]

Authorities Prepare for Vigorous Action Against Repetition of Disorders.

By The Associated Press

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., June 19—Governor George White's aid in obtaining a conference of eastern Ohio coal operators and representatives of the United Mine Workers will be sought by John Cinque, district president of the union.

The United Mine Workers is attempting to reorganize in the Ohio field, where approximately 3,000 workers are on strike under the direction of the National Miners' union, a rival organization.

Cinque said he hoped a working agreement could be reached. Cinque said a walkout would be declared today at the Provident mine, where operators refused to deal with him. About 150 of the mine's 400 workers already had struck under the leadership of the National Miners' union.

Authorities made preparations to deal with any recurrence of yesterday's disorders, in which eight members of the National Miners' union were injured in various clashes with mine guards.

The strikers demand an eight-hour day, reinstatement of men they claim were discharged for union connections, and abolition of the "average system."

Pinchot's Efforts To Effect Settlement in Pennsylvania Futile

PITTSBURGH, June 19 — Out of the debris of yesterday's futile parley in Harrisburg, today came speculation as to what would be the next move to end the bituminous coal strike in western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and eastern Ohio.

Following a conference yesterday in which Governor Pinchot talked over the situation with officials of the United Mine Workers of America, Samuel Pursglove, president of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal corporation, one of the major operators of the district, announced negotiations between his company and the union had been broken off.

Meanwhile, the National Miners' Union extended the strike in the West Virginia field to the Brook county operations, when by picketing they succeeded in partially suspending operations at the No. 3 mine of the West Virginia-Pittsburgh Coal company.

Refuses To Rescind Request for Removal of Gas Tax Head.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., June 19—The request of Governor George White that the state tax commission suspend J. C. Smart of Delaware, chief of the gasoline tax division, will stand.

This was announced after George C. Braden and John S. Edwardson, the Republican members of the commission, asked the governor yesterday to rescind his request, which resulted from Smart's alleged failure to certify collection of gasoline taxes from the Sellon Oil company of Cleveland.

Braden and Edwards told the chief executive Smart had not knowingly shielded the company from tax payments due on [illegible] gas. Braden said Smart had been led by company officials to believe the product was tax free.

SEARING HEAT WAVE COSTS LIVES OF FIVE

Extensive Areas in North, South and Midwest Suffer from Temperatures.

MERCURY NEAR 100 MARK

Weather Bureau Forecasts No Immediate Relief from Burning Swelter.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, June 19—Merciless heat ruled the northwest today.

The swelter burned out five lives. Heat prostrations were common. Two bathers drowned. Temperatures soared around the century mark.

Two ageing men succumbed to prostrations in Minnesota. A third died in Bismarck, N. D., in Milwaukee, a boy attending his graduation exercises, was stricken in the burning sun and died.

In Omaha, Neb., a man died at the wheel of his automobile, the wilting wave aggravating heart disease.

Little hope for relief was held out by the weather bureau.

Mercury Near 100

Temperatures above 90 prevailed yesterday throughout most of the western half of the United States and at least two places, Phoenix, Ariz., and Amarillo, Tex., the mercury climbed to the 100 mark or higher.

In Chicago, a maximum temperature of 92 degrees was reached. It was the hottest it had been this year and only one degree lower than the all-time record for June 18.

Temperatures of 90 or higher were general throughout northwest, southwest, and midwest states. In many sections, farmers said that unless there was immediate relief, crops would suffer seriously. Most sections have had sufficient rain, but it was feared crops could not stand sudden changes like that at Canton, Ill., where the mercury jumped 30 degrees in nine hours.

Phoenix Is Hottest

In the Dakotas, Minnesota, and around Chicago, dry parching winds accompanied the heat wave.

Phoenix was the hottest place in the country yesterday with a maximum of 104 degrees. Amarillo was next with 100. Some other places with maximums of over 90 were: Cairo, Ill., 92; Springfield, Ill., 96; Davenport, Ia., 92; St. Louis, 94, and Sioux City, 94.

DEACON ARRESTED IN HANGING OF PASTOR

Dallas Police Fail To Discover Motive in Attempted Lynching.

By United Press.

DALLAS, Tex., June 19—Just why four men stripped B. P. Brown of his clothing and hanged him by a new hempen rope from a chandelier over the pulpit of the North Dallas Baptist church, where he had preached many a sermon, remained a riddle today.

Brown, himself, none the worse for his experience, was unable to give the answer.

E. O. Maxwell, a former deacon in the church, was held for questioning by officers who sought to learn the origin of a series of notes received by Brown, a "fill in" minister, and the Rev. Homer L. Marler, regular pastor of the church.

Brown and Marler, police learned, have been and are close friends. Brown preaches at several Dallas churches regularly and works at night as a baggage clerk in a large hotel. He is 30 years old.

The preacher was found yesterday dangling near the pulpit. The fact that his would-be lynchers used a brand new rope had saved his life. The rope stretched, enabling him to reach a chair with his toes.

Ashley Bank Taken Over by State Department

COLUMBUS, O., June 19—The state banking department today took over the Bank of Ashley of Ashley in Delaware county. The bank, a private institution, had a capital stock of $15,000 and resources of $171,000. C. F. Sperry and Era Warrenstaff owned the bank. It will be liquidated. Frozen assets the state department said, caused it to close.

HOOVER BUSY AS TRIP ENDS

At Desk 15 Minutes After Arrival of Train in Washington.

ADDRESSES REVIEWED

Political Significance Given Trip Is Incorrect, President Feels.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, June 19. President Hoover returned from his mid-western speaking trip enthusiastic and encouraged, but feeling that he has been misrepresented by those who have regarded the journey as having some political significance.

Mr. Hoover feels that political implications which he did not have in mind at all have been read into his remarks, particularly those at Indianapolis, Ind., where he spoke at a big Republican chicken dinner. He would prefer to be regarded as President of the United States and not as President of the Republican party.

The President has been pictured generally as having in effect opened on this trip the campaign for his renomination and reelection. It is a picture he would rather discourage. He does not intend to make any more trips out of Washington for some time, feeling that to do so would only encourage further speculation of the kind which swirled around his trip this week. The picture he would give the country is that of its President sitting in the White House working rather than of a politician barnstorming about the country contriving to get himself reelected.

Mr. Hoover was at his desk 15 minutes after his train arrived here yesterday, and in 15 minutes more Secretary of State Stimson had been called in to discuss the latest international developments. Today the President called off his usual week-end trip to the Rapidan.

It is felt among the President's friends that too much significance was attached to numerous circumstances of the western trip. As the President's train passed through various states Mr. Hoover took local dignitaries aboard to ride with him during a portion of the trip. Virtually all of them were Republicans.

PROBERS REPORT ON TOMB FLIERS

LAMONT GETS STATEMENTS

Result of Investigation Placed Before U. S. Commerce Secretary.

TO DECIDE ACTION SOON

Pilots Liable for Suspension of License and $500 Fine or Both.

A decision on the attitude the department of commerce will take toward fliers who Tuesday disturbed speakers during the dedication of Harding memorial here was expected to be made today by Secretary Lamont in Washington, according to Associated Press news dispatches.

A report of the investigation of the incident made Wednesday by H. F. Rough of Detroit, aeronautics inspector of the department of commerce was forwarded to Washington yesterday from Detroit. The report probably contained statements made by Mayor L. Don Jones and other local officials regarding the maneuvers of the planes over the memorial crowd. Statements were taken here and in Columbus by Inspector Rough.

It was reported at the Curtiss-Wright Flying service at Port Columbus that the licenses of Harold Dietelhorst, John Cerrodi and Joseph Mackey of the flying service and Grant Melvin, a private pilot for the Detroit News had been suspended temporarily by orders telephoned from Washington.

Pilots for the flying service were carrying news pictures from Marion to various parts of the state.

Officials of the flying service also quoted Inspector Rough as previously stating that he saw no violation of flying rules by any of the four pilots during the addresses of President Hoover and other speakers on the dedicatory program.

President Hoover requested Secretary Lamont to make examples of the fliers shortly after leaving Columbus late Tuesday for Springfield to dedicate the Lincoln memorial. The presidential train went to Columbus immediately after the dedication here. Secretary Lamont joined the party in Columbus. President Hoover was similarly disturbed during an address at Valley Forge.

If the findings of Inspector Rough are upheld by Secretary Lamont, the penalty may be revocation of the pilots' licenses for varying periods and a fine of $500 or both, according to the Associated Press. While the report of Inspector Rough to the secretary was closely guarded at Detroit, indication were given that disciplinary action had been recommended against at least some of the fliers.

SPEAKS FOR FLIERS

Senator Bingham Asks President To Be as Lenient as Possible.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 19—The aviators who flew over the Harding memorial exercises at Marion, Ohio, earlier in the week, and aroused the ire of President Hoover today had a friend at court.

Senator Bingham, president of the National Aeronautic association, called on President Hoover and asked him to show the fliers all possible clemency.

Bingham said he had told the President the fliers were piloting planes with photographers and had not intended to disturb the program.

A few minutes after Bingham's call, Secretary Lamont, arriving at the White House for cabinet meeting, said that at least two of the aviators were flying above the prescribed 1,000 feet.

"We will get the whole matter straightened out today," Lamont said. "I don't think that any action we take will be unduly severe. Neither the aviation branch nor the President have any desire to be too severe with the fliers."

CUT WELFARE 1931 BUDGETS

Community Fund Board Takes Action To Meet Reduced Income.

MAKES 22 PER CENT CUT

All Agencies To Share in Decrease as Drive Goal Fails.

Marion Community Fund agencies will operate on 78 per cent of their 1931 budgets during the next 12 months, as a result of action taken yesterday by the executive board at a meeting in the Marion club yesterday afternoon.

The figure of 78 per cent was fixed by the board subject to the ability of the fund to collect subscriptions of $53,659.92 subscribed during the 1931 campaign.

Each agency will sustain an equal reduction in budget, according to the agreement made by the heads of all agencies when the fund was organized.

The 22 per cent cut this year is double the 11 per cent cut taken by each agency a year ago when the 1930 campaign fell short of its goal by a margin of several thousand dollars.

Agency heads today were working on programs for the next 12 months under the 22 per cent reduction, Wilbur H. Symes, chairman of the fund, said.

According to a report last night, 6,130 subscribers gave a total of $53,659.92 in the 1931 drive.

Plans were made for a general committee meeting of the fund June 25 at 7:30 p. m. at the Marion club. Election of an executive board for the ensuing year is one of the duties to come before this annual meeting.

MEXICAN EXECUTIVES CONFER ON PROTEST

Catholics Up in Arms at Proposed Measure To Restrict Number of Churches.

By The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY, June 19—Governor Adalberto Tejeda, of the state of Vera Cruz was in Mexico City today for a conference with President Pascual Ortiz Rubio, presumably in connection with the passage of anti-church bill by the Vera Cruz legislature.

President Ortiz Rubio summoned Governor Tejeda after Papal Nuncio Leopoldo Ruiz Y Flores had announced he would defy the measure restricting a population of more than a million to only 11 priests.

Official circles expressed the opinion that the religious situation, agitated by protests from thousands of Catholics, would be settled satisfactorily. A committee of Catholics, made representations to the department of interior and others called on the president.

Asserting that the enforcement of the bill would mean the "virtual closing of churches in Vera Cruz," the papal nuncio said he had ordered the priests to remain at their posts and to continue services, pending formal action on the part of the government. The church is expected to contest the law in the courts on constitutional grounds.

The papal nuncio, supported by the newspaper La Prensa, said he had confirmed reports that a Catholic priest had been ambushed and seriously wounded near Huatusco, Vera Cruz, on his return from administering the last rites to a dying person. Communists besieged the parish house, he said, but were driven off by Agrarians favorable to the church.

The dapper, youthful-looking executive of America's metropolis, whose $40,000 salary makes him only second to the President as the second highest paid public official in the United States, Mayor Walker said he felt "very fine." SMITH LOSES POST WITH STATE LIBRARY

Controversy Over Assistant Librarian Ends as Legislature Abolishes Job.

The controversy over the job of Carl W. Smith of Kenton as assistant state librarian, which has been brewing since Smith was appointed early this year, apparently had been ended today by the abolishment of the position by the house of the legislature.

In the appropriation bill which stipulates the amount of funds for state operation the next two years passed by the house yesterday, no provision was made for Smith's salary after July 1, according to Associated Press dispatches.

The abolishment of Smith's job accompanied several other reductions in the force of state employes made by the legislature to enable the state to operate within its income.

Smith was defeated in a campaign against Congressman Grant E. Mouser Jr. at the last election. He is a former Marion and Kenton newspaperman.

LIMA MURDER PROBE FOLLOWS NEW TRAIL

"Thrill" Slaying Clue Is Basis of Quest in Woods-Truesdale Case.

By The Associated Press

LIMA, O., June 19—New clues hinting that Thelma Woods, 17, and Karl Truesdale, 20, were slain by a gang of youths for a "thrill" were being traced by authorities today.

The new information expanded the search for Truesdale's body beyond the abandoned quarry pool where the body of Miss Woods, who had been beaten on the head and weighted with a large rock, was found last week.

Police said they had learned that Truesdale's body might have been hidden or buried some distance from the quarry and began a search of the surrounding country.

Meanwhile draining of the quarry pool was continued, with the water down to a six-foot level today.

If the new clues prove correct, police said they would release a former sweetheart of Miss Woods who has been held as a suspect since a week ago today. He is not implicated with the gang.

NEWSPAPERS OF COUNTRY ADD THEIR TRIBUTES TO PRAISE OF HARDING VOICED BY MEMORIAL DEDICATION SPEAKERS

DEDICATION of the Harding Memorial was the subject of editorial comments in virtually all newspapers of the country and the predominant theme throughout was hearty approval of the words of praise for the late President Harding and his achievements voiced by the distinguished speakers. Herewith is given a symposium of editorials representing the general trend of expression in the press of the entire nation.

AT THE MEMORIAL TOMB OF PRESIDENT HARDING.

Dedication of the Memorial tomb of Warren G. Harding at Marion, Ohio, has presented the opportunity for reminding the public that the late president accomplished very much during his brief career in the White House. There was danger that the scandals created by trusted friends, which inevitably furnished ammunition for attacks upon his administration, would be remembered, while the good that he actually did would be forgotten. It was the privilege of the two men who delivered eulogistic addresses yesterday—two men who knew him so well, former President Coolidge and the present chief executive, Herbert Hoover—to speak of the real Harding, and in doing so they have performed valuable service.

Harding took office following the Great war, when passions still ran high and our foreign and domestic relations were precarious He summoned an extra session of congress. The brief summary by Mr Coolidge includes the relief of the credit stringency by reviving the War Finance corporation; protection of our markets by tariff laws; restriction of immigration, creation of a budget bureau with rigid economy enforced; reduction of taxes, the first of a series; conversion of war material into cash; several billions of short-term governmental obligations paid or refunded; the shipping business and railroad administration put in the way of liquidation. In addition there were the negotiated peace treaties; the settlement of the long dispute with Colombia; resumption of diplomatic relations with Mexico; appointment of a commission to settle the war debts owing the United States and, big in results, the actual limitation of naval armaments and the settlement of international differences in the Pacific.

It was a vast work that was done under President Harding, a work that will live in history. Pity it is that his last days were burdened with the sorrows that came to him through the misdeeds of others. For "here was a man," as Mr. Hoover so aptly describes him, "whose soul was being seared by a great disillusionment. We saw him gradually weakened, not only from physical exhaustion, but from mental anxiety. Warren Harding had a dim realization that he had been betrayed by a few of the men whom he had trusted, by men whom he believed were his devoted friends. It was later proved in the courts of the land that these men had betrayed not alone the friendship and trust of their staunch and loyal friend, but they had betrayed their country."

And "that was the tragedy o the life of Warren Harding." He deserved a better fate, for his heart was true to his country and he was sincerely and unselfishly devoted to its rehabilitation.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

THE HARDING MEMORIAL.

The dedication of the memorial at Marion will mean neither more nor less to the millions of friends and admirers of Warren G. Harding because the ceremonial had been postponed to a point where delay invited criticism. It is done now, and befitting the high office which he held during a critical reconstruction period in the life of the country.

No ceremony, whatsoever its character, could add to or take from the late president the beauty of his life, the memory of his humanness or his abiding friendliness. Neither the ragtag critics nor the sarcasm of respectable journals which have elected, at times, to join the money-grubbing scandal-mongers can rob the man they malign of the place he holds in American hearts.

The Marion memorial is of exquisite conception and design and amazingly beautiful in an appropriate setting bordering the little city to which Warren Harding gave his young manhood and most of his mature years. No other man contributed so much of himself to his home town. In that respect he is local. The stately columns that rise above and surround his tomb are national.

Marion has the honor of having given Warren Harding to the nation. It is suitable that love builded him a place to sleep forever at home.—Toledo Blade.

JUSTICE TO PRESIDENT HARDING.

President Hoover's address at the dedication of the Harding memorial was both finely sensitive and keenly understanding It was indeed high time that some reminder was given of Warren G. Harding's qualities, if for no other reason than to counteract the utterly conscienceless scurrilities which have been published about him. In his capacity as President of the United States and as one who had served in President Harding's cabinet, Mr. Hoover is uniquely fitted to pass a verdict which future historians can not ignore. This he has done.

Mr Hoover did not claim perfection for his dead predecessor. Mr Harding was a man whose "transcendent gentleness of soul" made him the prey of vultures, with the result that his soul was 'seared by a great disillusionment." The tragedy of his life was that "he had been betrayed by a few of the men whom he had trusted, by men whom he had believed were his devoted friends ' As if this cruel faithlessness were not sufficient, there was added to it the "failure of probity—on the part of the betrayers—in the conduct of public trust." Remorselessly and rightly, Mr. Hoover declared that this is a crime "for which punishment can never atone."

Fittingly, too, came the reminder that great things were accomplished and begun under the Harding administration. The whole machinery of transferring the government from a war to a peace time footing was then initiated and the Washington arms conference forged the first link in the chain of naval limitation. Mr. Hoover neither ignored nor minimized the unconscionable acts of the Harding courtiers. But he did render justice to a man who was sorely tried and in so doing gave voice to the affection in which the name of Harding is held.—New York Herald-Tribune.

A MAN OF HONOR.

The republic which he served has paid its last official obsequies at the tomb of Warren G. Harding, twenty-ninth president of the United States, whose untimely passing in the midst of his administration will ever be one of the tragic moments of our national history.

To the magnificent memorial, built out of the generous contributions of remembering and grateful countrymen, came the President of the United States and an ex-president. Around them were the thousands of lesser personages and the plain people from whom Warren Harding had sprung and for whom his heart beat with warmth and understanding.

It seemed fitting that in the midst of these impressive panegyrics, all testifying to the worth of the man, there should have been a word spoken of those who betrayed his trust and who hastened, by that betrayal, his martyrdom as surely as if they had dealt with the tools of the assassin.

Warren Harding had trusted men. He had conveyed upon those whom he called friends vast responsibilities. Only a kindly man and a trusting man could have done this and been blinded to the deceit and treachery which began almost with his advent into the president's chair.

Those yesterday in Marion were made aware of this and became impressed with the tragedy of it after the President of the United States had given official expression to what had transpired.

"Warren Harding gave his life in worthy accomplishment for his country," said the President.

Thus the mists of time will come to shroud the tragedy of betrayal and he will be remembered for his good deeds and kindly purposes. History will record the substantial things, his practical service in the cause of world disarmament, his zeal for the comfort of disabled veterans, his passion for the orderly and efficient processes of government, his constructive efforts toward smoothing the troubled period of post-war America. All these were in the scope of President Harding's accomplishment in his brief administration.

To such a man the nation paid tribute yesterday. And with grateful hearts dedicated the magnificent tomb wherein he will rest for the ages.—Toledo Times, June 17.

HOOVER HONORS HARDING.

In his address at the tomb of Warren G Harding, President Hoover displayed a discerning, human quality of judgment and a candor of phrase that we have learned to expect from him. Inevitably the words of Mr. Hoover on this occasion are important, for in a very real sense they reflect the reasoned judgment of the government.

The President gave an intimate and personal estimate of Mr. Harding Knowing him closely as a member of his cabinet he saw him as a man rather than an official, and so laid stress on the kindliness, the generosity and the selflessness of the twenty-ninth president. Yet Mr Hoover recognized candidly that Warren Harding's career was tragic, that his untimely death was hastened by the disillusionment of betrayal by men he thought were friends.

Perhaps more significant really than the President's words of Harding was his unequivocal denunciation of the men who were disloyal to him and to the nation. There can be no mistaking the intense conviction of Mr. Hoover. Furthermore, although no names were given, this is the first plain-spoken indictment of the conspirators and lesser accomplices to come authoritatively from a president.

Mr. Hoover's candid words, certain of perpetual attention because they are the voic of the government, should write into the narrative of history a democracy's searing indictment of dishonesty in public office and a justification of the personal integrity of the president who became by fate the special victim of that sordid chapter of national life.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

• • •

IT NEEDED TO BE TOLD.

President Hoover, with a masterful choice of words, yesterday expressed what long has been in the hearts of Americans who knew, admired and loved Warren G. Harding. The betrayal of that simple, kindly and amiable man by his false friends has threatened to go down into history in a distorted fashion that would do the memory of Warren G. Harding a deep injustice.

The truth needed to be told. It needed to be told by some one in exalted position whose words would fly around the world. Herbert Hoover has rendered an important service to truth and justice in picturing for this generation the Harding that really existed and in excoriating his betrayers. • • •

There is no doubt that the dedication of the Harding memorial stirred President Hoover as no other and similar ceremony ever has done The intensity of his feeling, the depth to which his emotions had been stirred, were evident. Possessing himself a deep sense of justice, devotion to duty and loyalty to public trust, Mr. Hoover exercised an unusual vehemence in condemning those whose treachery to Harding has written a black chapter into American history. • • •

The true friends of Warren G Harding—and they are legion—have waited long for such a defense of him as President Hoover delivered over his tomb at Marion yesterday. It was a courageous and a Christian thing for the chief executive to do.

It was a thing that needed to be done before all that is mortal of Warren G. Harding is consigned finally to the bosom of the state that gave him birth.—Columbus Dispatch, June 17.

THE HARDING MEMORIAL.

Today at Marion, Ohio, whence he came from humble beginnings into the highest honors within the nation's gift, a marble temple is being dedicated to the memory of Warren Gamaliel Harding, twenty-ninth president of the United States Two successors in that august office, Calvin Coolidge, who immediately followed Mr. Harding, and President Hoover, are at Marion to lead in the dedicatory ceremonies and eulogize the great-hearted Ohioan whose White House career was doomed to pass into history amid many clouds • • •

"The good which men do," said Mark Antony at Caesar's tomb, "is oft interred with their bones" The catalogue of good standing to the credit of President Harding deserves disinterment. He appointed notable public servants — Taft, Hughes, Mellon, Dawes He gave Herbert Hoover at the department of commerce the opportunity to develop that organizing genius which eventually was to find recognition through his election to the presidency. President Harding made ambassadorial appointments of eminent merit—Herrick to France, Houghton to Germany, Woods to Japan—all of whom rendered service which drew visibly tighter the bonds between those countries and the United States

And today is an appropriate hour for the American people to remember that it was Warren G. Harding, who in his speech of acceptance at Marion in 1920, gave the lead t the cause of world disarmament. "I can hear in the call of conscience," said Mr. Harding, "an insistent voice for largely reduced armaments throughout the world, with attending reduction of burdens upon peace-loving humanity. We wish to give of American influence and example: we must give of American leadership to that invaluable accomplishment" The Washington conference of 1921-22 was the direct outcome of President Harding's initiative in the cause that lay nearest his heart—that cause to which President Hoover at this hour is once again giving "of American influence and leadership."

So it is well that with the soothing passage of time the nation is in mood to take inventory of Warren G. Harding's presidential career as a whole. In it, when all is said and done, there was vastly more wheat than chaff, and the American people will see in today's events at Marion a fitting, if belated, recognition of that historical fact.—Washington Star, June 16

MR. HOOVER AT MARION.

When Warren G. Harding announced the personnel of his cabinet it was observed he was bringing to the council table of the administration several men of outstanding ability. • • And now Mr. Hoover, elevated to the seat Harding was then about to occupy, comes to Ohio to dedicate the long-undedicated tomb of his dead chief. • • •

That Harding was "betrayed" by men beholden to him for vast political favors is an item in history. That he died prematurely, burdened by the pains of his awakening, is equally clear. That he served as president through two momentous years of readjustment and contributed to the healing process no one questioned.

Mr. Hoover handles a supposedly delicate task with his customary discretion. Only by implication does he credit his distinguished predecessor with responsibility for the economic recovery which began a year and a half after Harding entered the White House. The depression itself reached its peak after the Republican landslide of 1920, almost at the moment of the Harding inauguration. Which is of no importance. • • •

President Hoover does not overemphasize the world importance of the arms conference which, under the leadership of Harding and Hughes, pioneered in the task of turning the thought of the nations toward peace by reasonable disarmament.

Custom dictates that a president's tomb shall be dedicated by the president. Andrew Johnson spoke at the original dedication of the Lincoln memorial at Springfield; Ulysses S. Grant in 1879 and today Mr. Hoover rededicated the tomb as it is successively rebuilt. It was proper that the Harding memorial should remain undedicated until a president was ready to attend.—Cleveland Plain Dealer, June 16.

THE HARDING MEMORIAL.

To President Hoover, Calvin Coolidge and all who took part in the dedication of the Harding memorial at Marion yesterday the people of Ohio are sincerely grateful. The ceremonies were deeply impressive, the tributes of the dead president's high associates were all in good taste, and the entire occasion was marked by such dignity and reverence that it could not help satisfy all who were troubled by the fact that this last honor to one of the state's notable sons had been so long delayed. We can not think of Harding without sadness, but we shall remember him as one whose career deserved a happier ending.—Youngstown Vindicator, June 17.

DEDICATING THE HARDING MEMORIAL.

President Hoover and former President Coolidge, in their respective addresses at the dedication of the memorial tomb of Warren G Harding at Marion, Ohio, acquitted themselves with notable success of a rather difficult and delicate task. Naturally they dwelt on the kindliness and gentleness of Mr. Harding's nature, his sincere interest in peace and good will among nations, races and classes, and his essential democracy. • • •

Warren G. Harding was not in any sense a leade of men, or a statesman, but, unquestionably, he possessed and exercised with marked success certain admirable qualities that were needed in national and international politics after the World war. It is a significant fact that many of his opponents changed their estimates of his character after his inauguration, and offered him hearty support in his efforts to promote peace, reduction of armaments and arbitration and economic cooperation by the nations • • • He was a victim of circumstances, and he had the defects of his lovable qualities The American people will remember him for the good work he performed or initiated not for his tragic failures Chicago News. • • •

HOOVER AT HARDING'S TOMB.

The dedication of the Harding memorial at Marion, Ohio, brings to a welcome close a long and trying experience filled with moments of pique and embarrassment for all who were concerned The memorial project was conceived in an atmosphere and a spirit of distorted proportions and, in spite of popular and official apathy, it was carried through by the Harding Memorial association with jealous and resentful loyalty

Warren Gamaliel Harding was not the kind of a man of whom it is easy to make a social and political pariah There was nothing of the untouchable about him. His instincts were generous and humane, and he interpreted them to those about him with kindliness and geniality. He possessed in great measure the priceless gift of winning and holding friendships. His proneness to bestow his own friendship somewhat too indiscriminately was but n exaggeration of his qualities. It seems likely that he lacked that sharp and clamorous apprehension of the degrees of rectitude which protects those who have it from many not too obvious pitfalls. And he had one solid but dangerous virtue, loyalty, which, coupled to his amiable weakness for promiscuous companionship, was a fatal defect.—Detroit News.

• • •

OHIO IS PROUD OF HIM

The memory of Warren G. Harding becomes more esteemed, his public career more justly appraised, and his worth as a man more admired as the years go by. In his personal life he was lovable, generous and honest, and possessed of all the fine qualities of humanity; but as a public executive he was too amiable and trusting. Because he was lovable and generous, he placed a trust in many friends, most of whom were loyal and devoted, but a few, to their shame, betrayed him.

The people of Ohio knew Harding as a patriotic editor and constructive legislator, and took pride in his high standing as a leader in the United States senate. When he was nominated for president his countless followers in this state knew that he would take seriously the responsibility of this exalted office and believed he would stand for policies of benefit to the nation. His victory at the polls was unprecedented and Ohio viewed her son in high estate with a feeling of hopefulness and confidence.

The tragic story of his betrayal is known to all, but, as the curtain of the years is lifted and a true perspective visualized, the figure of Warren G. Harding emerges as one whose career was typically American. From lowly beginnings he made his own way, by his prudence he accumulated an honest fortune, and by his outstanding personality he built his own political position. If the end of his public career was clouded by disloyal friends, the fact remains that his own aim was high and that Harding, the man and the president, needs no apologist.

Today the President of the United States dedicates his tomb at Marion. The most prominent in the nation, including a former president, will pay him tribute, but after all Ohio claims him as her own son and is proud of him. —Ohio State Journal.

HONEST GOVERNMENT

In his address at the tomb of Warren G. Harding, President Hoover said the quite obvious things about Mr. Harding but he said them exceeding well. That Mr. Harding was betrayed by men indebted to him for political favors is known to all; that he was broken in health and spirit and his death hastened by the pain of a vast disillusionment, is unquestioned.

In his eulogy of the dead man there was no attempt at overemphasis of the achievements of his administration. It is only by inference that he credits his predecessor with a part in the economic recovery that came after he entered the White House, and the international arms conference is properly recalled as his chief contribution in leadership.

The significant part of President Hoover's address, and a part long worth remembering, was his unsparing denunciation of the men who were disloyal to Mr. Harding and the nation. • • • •

He speaks with the full force of our government, and his condemnation of one of the blackest chapters in the history of American democracy is expressive of the sentiment of every honest citizen.

This same searing indictment applies not only to a betrayal of trust in federal office; it fits states and local instances as well. A traitor to the public trust is no more to be despised in Washington than he is in any other office within the grant of the people, and President Hoover may have rendered a far greater service than he realized in speaking for an awakened public conscience in political life.—Wheeling Intelligences

• • •

EQUAL TO THE OCCASION

In the city where President Harding conducted a newspaper for a great many years and on the hallowed spot where his remains lie buried President Hoover this afternoon dedicated the memorial, a beautiful piece of architecture.

His address was more than a dedicatory one. It was a masterly exposition of a man who was beloved by his fellow creatures and who was deceived by unscrupulous politicians, who, in an hour of great stress betrayed their country ••••

The deeds of Mr. Harding, his loyalty in time of a great crisis should be an inspiration to the youth of America, and the shortcomings of the administration, the betrayal, should warn us that even a president can not save our country, if it is honeycombed with grafters.—Sheboygan Press

GOOD CAUSE FOR APPROBATION.

The nation is dedicating the memorial to President Warren G. Harding, a ceremony for which the people of our state had long entreated. We have no doubt that in the many tributes that will be given to Warren G. Harding, his state and the nation will find good cause for approbation, not only in their recital of the fine services which he gave his country at a moment critical in its history, but their praise for the loyalty and admiration of hosts of sincere friends who knew his personal worth, and his long struggle up the steep to the nation's place of greatest honor and responsibility The memorial itself is its own best token of the esteem of these friends whose confidence in him was never shaken for a moment by the wretched effort of his political enemies to destroy his good name and deny the claim which his own character and achievements gave him to an abiding fame.

His own idealism, and his hope for an abiding peace that would save the world's producers from the blighting effect of a militarism that was sapping their energies and making them perpetual conscripts to the sinister plans of imperialism and vainglory, was revealed in his calling of the disarmament conference which instantly rallied the world's acclaim Time and its truthful servant, history, will write their own inerrant judgment of the worth of these achievements beyond the studied power of of his contemporaries to impu

HISTORIC LANDMARK DESTROYED BY FIRE

Major Portion of Georgia Hostelry Wrecked; Housed Confederate Notables.

By The Associated Press

MACON, Ga., June 19—The left wing of the 95-year-old Hotel Lanier, headquarters of the state government while Sherman was marching through Georgia, was destroyed by fire early today and the rest of the six-story structure, except the fire-proof right wing was badly damaged.

So far as could be determined all the approximately 150 guests escaped, most of them in night clothes. T. W. Hooks, owner of the hotel, estimated the damage at $[illegible]00, which did not include the property of guests that was destroyed.

The hotel is one of the most historic in the state. The Civil war governor, Joseph E. Brown, took refuge there with his staff when Sherman neared Atlanta and most of the state business was transacted there for several months. Jefferson Davis, president of the confederacy, was a guest of the hotel during the war and spent the first night there after his capture by federal forces in a nearby town.

SUES FOR DIVORCE

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., Files Petition at Reno.

By The Associated Press

RENO, Nev., June 19—Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., filed suit for divorce here today charging that his wife, the former Mary Davidson Weir Logan of Chicago, has treated with him extreme cruelty. The suit was filed after an early morning conference between Vanderbilt and his attorney, Samuel Platt. Beyond the general allegation of cruelty, it contained nothing concerning differences in the Vanderbilt family.

Peter Arno, New York acricaturist here for a divorce, announced last night that he was considering the desirability of bringing Vanderbilt and his attorney, Samuel Platt, to account for "absurd" statements blaming him for troubles in the Vanderbilt household

Arno's attorney, Clyde D. Souter, also issued a formal statement in which he said the question of whether a suit for slander would be brought was being debated.

NEW LEADER RULES CHICAGO GANGSTERS

Johnny "The Immune" Torrio Assumes Role Once Held by Al Capone.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, June 19 — Today's Herald and Examiner said Johnny "the immune" Torrio has succeeded Alphonse Capone.

The proclamation that Torrio had invested himself with the robes of gangland leadership, the newspaper said, was posted last night in the haunts of the half-world.

Rumors have been persistent for weeks that the protege of "Big Jim" Colosimo had abandoned his Florida estate to intervene once more in underworld activitities.

Bullets from George "Bugs" Moran gang guns hastened Torrio's decision several years ago to quit Chicago's gang warfare. Twice before attempts on his life were unsuccessful. Thus he gained the sobriquet of "the immune."

It was Torrio who brought Capone west from Brooklyn a decade ago to manage Colosimo's twenty-second street vice district, and when Torrio abdicated, Capone climbed onto the throne.

The newspaper said it was Torrio who ordered Capone to "take the rap" against him and plead guilty to the government's indictments charging liquor law and income tax violations. On this plea, Capone will be sentenced June 30.

New York Death Mystery Inquiry at Standstill for Present

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, June 19—Theories before Nassau county authorities in their investigation of the death of Starr Faithfull centered on suicide today as the grand jury was called to give the case attention again.

District Attorney Elvin N. Edwards had little hope of solution of the mystery until the arrival on Monday, of Dr. G. Jameson Carr, surgeon of the trans-Atlantic liner Franconia.

Dr. Carr is on his way from England with a letter written him by Starr, in which she said, "When you receive this I will be dead."

Mr. Edwards still holds to his theory that the bizarre young beauty was murdered. Inspector Harold King, chief of Nassau detectives, is giving attention to the possibility that the girl fell or jumped from the Mauretania.

DISCUSS WAR DEBTS

Secretary Mellon Confers with Prime Minister MacDonald.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 19—The London Express said today that Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon was visiting England "in response to a private invitation from the British government to discuss the revision of war debts."

"Mellon is only prepared to discuss the revision on the understanding that Great Britain joins in an international boycott of Russia," the paper said, "and takes practical steps to reduce British expenditure for armaments."

The Daily Mail said in reference to Mr. Mellon's conferences with Prime Minister MacDonald and Montagu Norman, chairman of the bank of England, that "something of the fate of nations hung on their words."

Daily Proverb—"It is better to reprove privately than to be angry secretly."

According to a story from North Wilkesboro, North Carolina, certain injuries suffered by a man who fell 300 feet down a mountainside near there may prove fatal. The thing seems reasonable.

Prohibition agents seized 2,500 half barrels of beer in a garage in Hoboken, New Jersey. We'll say those New Jersey people are mighty liberal in their construction plans when they go to building garages.

Another American consulate in Germany, that at Leipzig, has been stoned by communist youths. What the youthful reds given to such practices need for what's ailing them are good, old-fashioned spankings.

Three churches in Danville, Virginia, were struck by lightning during a storm one night this week. The proposition holds good always. It's never the lowly which is singled out for assault.

Before a League of Nations committee gathering, beauty contests were charged with involving moral dangers. Judging by the way a number of them have panned out, they involve financial dangers as well.

Against a population gain of thirty-eight per cent. between 1915 and 1929, Chicago's taxes increased 278 per cent. during the same period, the levy being now more than two and a half times what it was fourteen years ago. The sad phase of the thing to the country generally is that what is true in Chicago is largely true the country over.

Breakfasting in London, Captain Frank Hawks, one day this week, lunched in Rome and was back in London in time for dinner, the round trip having taken nine hours and forty-four minutes. Despite the fact that Europeans have faster planes than any constructed over here, they do not seem to have the ability to get anywhere with them as does this American flier.

The brain cavity of the skull of a prehistoric man just discovered in central Australia is but half the size of that of the average man of today. Still the thing is not conclusive. A small brain cavity full of grey matter may be far better than a large one full of sawdust.

Perhaps no better illustration of the extent to which lawlessness has developed in New York City could be offered than that of the three men who entered the home of a resident one day this week and forced the occupants to open a safe containing $200,000 worth of jewelry, which they subsequently offered to return upon payment to them of that sum in money "as a reward."

Professor Douglas Clyde MacIntosh, of Yale, has filed in the United States supreme court a petition for the reconsideration of its decision denying him naturalization because of his unwillingness to take the customary oath of allegiance. These aliens actually seem to feel that they should be given more consideration than that granted American citizens.

The President's Tour.

President Hoover can be no more pleased with the four-day speaking tour he has just ended than his admirers are, both with him and the tone of his speeches. A symposium of opinion shows him to have been remarkably well received. Comments in the press concerning the speeches he made have been favorable, almost without exception. His Indianapolis speech, in particular, met with favor. Of it, the New York Times said: "It is an excellent speech, well considered, well timed and precisely on the note which ought to be struck at present. As an offset to the prevailing dejection, the President's robust faith in the assured future of this country comes as a happy reinforcement for all who are struggling with adversity and are determined, as he is, to conquer it."

Mr. Hoover has returned to Washington where he will spend the summer at work in preparation for the trial that awaits his administration when the new congress convenes. Predictions that he will meet all issues brought against him by opposition within and without his party without bending, though trite, are additional evidence of his robust faith in the assured future of the country.

It is not amiss, in passing, to mention the considerable aid to lively interest in government afforded by opportunities for the people to see and hear officials who hold high positions. As a mere name representing a power in the governmental structure, the President of the United States is a cold, impersonal being. As an animate, smiling, talking individual he is something else again—a human governing figure. When the President takes a turn around the country the results are not confined necessarily to increases in his popularity. The people also benefit.

In Neighborhood Terms.

Many motives have been assigned for the European trips of Secretaries Stimson and Mellon this summer, some of them falsely no doubt. It is true, however, that part of the business they will mix with pleasure will have to do with the international disarmament conference scheduled to convene next February. The conference will be the most important international gathering since that one at Versailles twelve years ago this month, when the treaty of peace that marked the close of the World war was signed by representatives of the Allied powers and Germany.

Before the treaty was signed, the Allies dispatched a note to Germany affirming that "the Allied and Associated powers wish to make it clear that their requirements in regard to German armaments were not made solely with the object of rendering it impossible for Germany to resume her policy of military aggression They are also the first steps toward that general reduction and limitation of armaments which they seek to bring about as one of the most fruitful preventatives of war."

That note, that contract as the Germans think of it, makes it essential that an international disarmament conference be held as soon as possible. Germany insists, and with good reason, that it has been betrayed. It stripped itself of its armamaent on the promise that other nations would do likewise, but the other parties thereto did not keep faith. Twelve years have passed, and nothing has been done to equalize the defensive differences between Germany and its conquerors. Unless the coming disarmament conference is successful, the political faction in Germany that has been stirring up discontent with the harsh terms of the treaty of Versailles may be expected to demand that German obligations under the treaty be denounced and that the country withdraw from the League of Nations.

The situation is as simple in principle as a neighborhood agreement whereby a number of families band together to force one family whose dog has caused trouble to get rid of it. The family agrees, on the condition that the other families will get rid of their dogs too, in order to insure every one against future trouble. A few months later, however, the other families still have their dogs and are buying new ones to put with them. The one family whose dog is gone certainly has reason to feel disgruntled with its neighbors.

That is the case with Germany, expressed in neighborhood terms. That is the reason Secretaries Stimson and Mellon may be expected to talk about the coming international disarmament conference while they are in Europe. Germany's demands for a settling of differences can not be disregarded any longer.

Having read press reports of the instructions issued by President Hoover as the result of the annoyance caused speakers and auditors at the Harding memorial dedication, the officer in charge at Scott field wisely concluded to abandon the proposed flight of two army blimps to the rededication of the Lincoln tomb at Springfield, Illinois. If the annoyance experienced here results in preventing future similar annoyances the country over we may learn to recall it without regret.

Everybody Denies Everything.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., is said to have chased Peter Arno, the comedy cartoonist, with a gun, presumably to make Mr. Arno wish he hadn't paid attentions to Mr. Vanderbilt's wife He is said to have fired a shot at the cartoonist, who outdistanced all danger to get into hiding, where he remains at this writing.

But Mr. Arno denies that he was chased, denies he paid attention to Mr. Vanderbilt's wife, and denies that he is in hiding. Mr. Vanderbilt, on the other hand, denies the gun he used in chasing Arno was loaded. His wife denies that he tried to fire a shot, and his attorney doubts he even had a gun.

There are denials that the pursuit was made in automobiles, and denials that it was made on foot Though the affair took place in Reno, the marital maladjustment Mecca, there are denials that the principals concerned were in the city on business, as well as denials that Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt may not be getting along so well.

And to make the incident complete, denial is hereby made that there are such people as Mr. and Mrs Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., and Peter Arno. It's all done with mirrors and the whole episode occurred in Sauk Centre, Minnesota, and tomorrow it will turn out to have been just a bad dream.

Henry Ford says that wages are the only thing that should be high in this country. Are we to take it that Mr. Ford contemplates the abandonment of his plants in foreign lands?

Major General Robert Alexander, in his newly-published "Memoirs of the World War," blames the late President Wilson for "the unnecessarily heavy loss" of American life during that conflict, holding that "the four years of dreamy platitudes which in defiance of repeated warnings launched us into the war with no adequate preparations for either its demands or its perils" were responsible for much of the heavy toll. It's a pity that the cause of preparedness can not be advanced adequately without attacks upon one who has gone.

Representative McDuffie, of Alabama, Democratic whip of the house, characterizes President Hoover's Indianapolis speech as a declaration of his candidacy for another term, and asks: "What has become of the political truce, which Senator Watson, Republican senate leader, announced early last March on leaving the White House?" If our memory serves us correctly, it was hamstrung about six days later by the unholy alliance between the Democratic federal lawmakers and their allies, the so-called "Progressives."

The agricultural department in Washington reports that drought conditions in the Northwest at present are even more severe than those of last year and that the situation in the Middle West and Mississippi valley, unless they get more rain, may rival that of last year. The outlook is far from a cheerful one, but there is always the streak of silver in the stormcloud As yet there is nothing to indicate that a lot more millions will have to be turned over to the grape growers of California to save their great "agricultural" industry to the country.

Editorial Opinion.

A FILM MENACE.

Dr. A. H. Upham, president of Miami university, at the alumni luncheon a few days ago, declared that taxpayers throughout the country are revolting against paying the cost of tax-supported state institutions for the reason that the motion pictures have led the taxpayers to believe that college and university life consists entirely of wild parties and fantastic escapades. He urged the reeducation of the public by the alumni of institutions in all parts of the country on the subject of higher education in order to counteract the harm done by the films in spreading burlesque conceptions of college life.

Dr. Upham denied and repudiated the alleged slander of the films. It is his opinion that the number of students affected by the jazz side of college life is negligible in comparison with the number of students who live a sane and useful college life. He insisted that it is a grave mistake to suppose that the college is all jazz and whoopee and extravagance. The public must be set right in this matter in order to defeat the false impression which Dr. Upham charges the silver screen is impressing up the taxpaying public.

There can be but little doubt that the comparatively few incidents of college revelry and imitations of Hollywood wildness and extravagance have been magnified out of all true proportion. Miami, and every other educational institution in the country, is sending out into the world annually those who will make good and constructive citizens—many, many more than have been tainted in any degree with the malodorous jazz spirit of the age. Taxpayers should not be deceived in this. The state institutions are, and should be, maintained to give opportunity to those who for one reason or another are not able to attend the more imposing educational institutions of the country, for from these state-supported schools continuously are being graduated students who will constitute a stable and reliable element in the national life.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

WAITING ON EUROPE TO DISARM.

The excellent position of the United States for bargaining with Europe is now brought into high relief by the German move for reparations revision and by the recrudescence of war debt discussions in the Old world. But, as Mark Sullivan brought out in a recent Washington dispatch to the Journal, Americans know of no reason at this moment for linking reparations and debt payments, nor for connecting the two with disarmament in any expectation that the administration at Washington will take the initiative to any greater extent than already is evident in recent utterances of President Hoover.

Suspension of reparations payments is definitely provided for in the Young plan, by which Germany may at any time announce to creditors that her economic life "may be seriously endangered by the transfer in part or in full of the postponable portion of the indemnities."

Similarly, suspension of war debt payments to the United States—the ultimate creditor—is provided for in the debt payment agreements. Three years may pass in such a moratorium, before there would be any need for specific discussion among the governments.

Thus it is apparent that all the talk of revision and suspension in Europe is so much political palaver. That it might link up with disarmament under certain contingencies is a foregone conclusion, when we consider the United States' position as a reasonable government. But the strategy of bargaining has certainly not reached the stage where Washington would be likely to make the opening proposal. The initiative is clearly incumbent upon the parties to the reparations agreement, and to the debtors further along the line. Assuredly, they have had notice enough of this country's receptive attitude in respect of disarmament, and they are fully cognizant of safeguards in reparations and debt agreements that preclude any necessity for international parleys on those subjects.

Moreover, it is axiomatic that the American people, on whom would fall the burden of war costs if debts were reduced or cancelled, are in no mind to be made the goats. They will have to have something for their money, something besides a receipt for paying war costs of other powers, while, in effect, they support enormous armies in Europe. But if they were to be convinced that they might buy a considerable measure of armament reduction, including that of their own defensive establishment, they might join in such a magnificent undertaking and regard the money well spent. It might even be viewed as the noble privilege of the American people to be the agents of world disarmament.—Minneapolis Journal.

Animals Aid in War on Disease.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Much valuable information has been contributed to mankind by the study of animal diseases. This method of obtaining knowledge has often solved many perplexing and difficult problems.

In 1911, McCoy described a disease of rodents. It was particularly common in Tulare county in the west and was believed to be prevalent only in that section of the country. It thus received the name of "Tularemia" and the germ causing the disease was called "bacterium tulareuse"

It was originally believed to be only a disease of animals, particularly of rodents, such as the wild rabbit and squirrel. Subsequently, it was noted that man often had this ailment.

The transmission of this disease occurs either by handling diseased animals or by the bite of certain insects which have previously fed an a diseased animal. So far as known, this disease is believed to be found only in the United States and Japan.

The attack comes on suddenly. A pustule or pimple appear at the point of infection. This pustule is painful and eventully forms an ulcer. Headache is usually present, with chills, general body pains, vomiting and fever.

The fever may be very high and last for two or three weeks. Recovery is slow but it always follows. In many cases, however, it may be months before the individual regains his former strength.

Since this disease is found among persons handling unhealthy animals, precautions against infection should be taken. During the rabbit season animals should be carefully examined for any possible contamination.

In an attempt to prevent the disease among laboratory workers, the wearing of rubber gloves has been made compulsory. It is advisable that in contaminated areas all cooks, marketmen and hunters wear rubber gloves when dressing rabbits.

Twenty Years Ago.

It was Monday, June 19.

Death claimed James Proctor Knott, former governor of Kentucky. It was Knott who made the famous "Duluth" speech, satirically immortalizing "The Zenith City of the Unsalted Seas."

The Kenton Gas and Electric company was sold to the Hardin-Wyandot Lighting company.

Kenneth Engbert, fifteen, suffered internal injuries when he was thrown and dragged, one of his feet caught in a stirrup, by a frightened pony.

Friends received cards announcing the secret marriage, August 29, 1910, of Miss Helen V. Carr and Mr. Earl De Veny Ray.

Gilbert's Theory.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

During the sixteenth century it required splendid courage to be a scientist, in the sense in which that term is employed today. The system of instruction, the entire curriculum, was dominated by Aristotelian influence. What Aristotle said went. If he had recorded nothing about a certain subject there was little use in studying it. Authority dominated the field of instruction. The laboratory and the experimental method were virtually unknown, although here and there were obscure scientific workers and little workshops which might, by exaggeration, be termed laboratories.

A noted figure who deserves the recognition of posterity for his modern attitude toward scientific inquiry and his elaborate investigations, is William Gilbert He was born at Colchester in 1544, the son of a very respectable burgess of the town, who eventually became city recorder. William must have had a good preparatory training, for at eighteen he became a student at St. John's college, Cambridge. He demonstrated his ability as a scholar, becoming at the age of twenty-one a fellow and examiner in mathematics. Being of an adventurous nature, and preferring a more active life, he studied medicine and took his M. D. at the age of twenty-nine. The next three years he devoted to foreign travel.

Returning to England in 1573, he settled down to the practice of medicine in London. In a comparatively short while he won high repute as a medical practitioner. In the course of time he was elected president of the College of Physicians and became the personal physician of both Queen Elizabeth and King James I. He was no doubt an excellent physician; but it is most likely that his great repute as a scientist enhanced his fame as a physician.

At William Gilbert's home, near St. Paul's cathedral, there met a group of savants which he had organized. It was a genuine society of philosophers, believed to have been one of the first of its kind in Europe. At his home Gilbert had his laboratory, and here he conducted those experiments in chemistry, electrical and magnetism, which procured him prodigious fame.

At that time the most fantastic superstitions prevailed regarding the subjects of magnetism. People supposed, for example, that in the Arctic regions was located an island or mountain of magnetic ore, toward which the magnetic needle pointed. It was even said, and doubtless believed by many, that when a ship approached this island, all the bolts and nails which held the timbers together flew out, and the vessel fell in pieces!

Credit of the highest character should go to Gilbert for rescuing the subject of the magnet from the realm of fantasy and placing it squarely within the field of science He was an acquaintance, for example, of that great sailor and navigator, Sir Francis Drake, who supplied him with much accurate information regarding the behavior of the magnetic needle.

It was Gilbert who advanced the correct theory, namely, that the earth itself was a great magnet. This theory he succeeded in demonstrating. From a study of the electrical properties of bodies he was able to prove that there were many materials besides amber and jet which could be electrified by friction. This he demonstrated by means of an electroscope of his own manufacture. To Gilbert we owe the word electricity, which he in turn derived, in the form "electricitas," from "elektron," the Greek word from amber.

Gilbert's chief scientific discoveries were embodied in his book, "De Magnete," dealing with the subject of magnets and magnetism. To Gilbert, Galileo wrote: "I extremely admire and envy the author of 'De Magnete.' I think him worthy of the greatest praise for the many new and true observations which he has made, to the disgrace of so many vain and fabling authors, who wrote not from their own knowledge only, but repeat everything they hear from the foolish and vulgar, without attempting to satisfy themselves of the same by experience."—Copyright, 1931, International Feature Service, Inc.

Fourth Ohio at Gettysburg.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

Sixty-eight years ago next month an Ohio volunteer regiment organized at Camp Jackson for Civil war service, distinguished itself in the battle of Gettysburg. It was the Fourth O. V. I., organized on April 25, 1861, that with two other regiments drove the Confederates from Cemetery hill after they had driven the Eleventh corps from the field and taken two of our batteries. It was a fierce and daring movement, and received the strongest commendation from Generals Hancock, Howard and Gibbon, who witnessed it.

The Fourth O. V. I. was made up of men of great courage and patriotism who responded to the first call for service in the war. Two companies of it came from Mt. Vernon, two from Delaware, two from Kenton, two from Marion, one from Canton and one from Wooster. The men were permitted to choose their own officers, and by ballot in Camp Jackson they elected Lorin Andrews, who had left the presidency of Kenyon college to serve his country, to be their colonel. Andrews was trained to teach rather than fight, but he addressed himself to his new and strange duties with intelligence, energy and courage. Death by disease cut him down early in his military career. Falling ill with camp fever in the fall, he was taken home to die. He died at Gambier on October 4, and John S. Mason of the regular army succeeded to the command of the regiment. Later James H. Godman was its colonel.

The work of the regiment at Gettysburg stands out conspicuously in its service, but it did highly creditable work at Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville and other notable engagements, and was one of the regiments sent to New York to quell the riots that developed there in opposition to the draft.

J. S. Robinson, of Kenton, who after the war served as secretary of state of Ohio, Eugene Powell, of Delaware, and H. B. Banning, of Mt. Vernon, were among the captains of the regiment. The Fourth served to the close of the war, its last service being rendered around Washington, and there is was mustered out of the service.

Washington, June 19—While those hundre of army aviators were staging their maneuv over the capital on Memorial day, their o time boss was putting on a private show of h own which went by virtually unnoticed

General "Billy" Mitchell came up from h estate at Middleburg, Virginia, where he living the life of a country gentleman, a did a little flying of his own.

For the first time in five years he took t controls of a plane and flew it to Philadelph and back. In the passenger seat was an o friend ready to take over the ship if nec sary. But he was not needed. Whether it w a coincidence or not, it is interesting that t former flying chief of the army returned the air for the first time just five years aft he resigned. His court-martial sentence f speaking out of turn about Uncle Sam's a force was for that period, too.

So it looks as if the general voluntar served his sentence, though out of the arm entirely.

Ft. Wayne Physician Addresses Medical, Dental Groups

DR. M. PORTER IS SPEAKER

Tells of Benefits To Be Had by Hospital from Surgeons Body.

SPEAKS AFTER DINNER

Staff for Local Institution To Be Named Shortly, Mouser Says.

The vision which inspired the founders of the American College of Surgeons was described to Marion medical men, dentists, nurses and a group of interested citizens last night in Hotel Harding by Dr. Miles Porter of Ft. Wayne, vice president of the American College of Surgeons.

Pointing out that the best and most beneficial organization any community can have is a well organized hospital, Dr. Porter urged Marion surgeons and physicians to carry to completion their plans for a staff in the local hospital, the organization of which will bring recognition of the American College of Surgeons to the local institution.

Form Staff Soon

The point was well taken, as Dr. H. K. Mouser, chief of staff, announced in an interview after the meeting that the staff organization will be completed and announced within a week

A well organized hospital should radiate health knowledge as well as look after the ills and ailments of persons, Dr. Porter declared, outlining the obligation of a hospital and members of the staff to the public. The ideal hospital is a health center for the territory in which it is located, he said.

Any hospital staff is a potential factor of power in health work of any community. Whether this power is directed in the right channels depends upon the individual members, Dr. Porter continued. None of us, he said, can keep from making an occasional mistake, but all of us can profit by those mistakes as well as the mistakes of others.

We want men whose professional ability, character and moral standing have been tried as members of the staff, he said. He also said that the influence and help given by women's groups such as the Women's Hospital board here had always proven very beneficial

Early in his address, Dr. Porter swung into an attack on evil practices generally prevalent in the meical profession today, explaining that the American College of Surgeons, attempting to give the public a better type of service from the medical profession, was greatly interested in eliminating deplorable pactices of a great many doctors.

Raps Fee Splitting

"Nothing in the surgical line has cost more lives or more suffering than the payment by surgeons for patients—commonly knwn as fee-splitting," Dr. Porter declared. The influence of money in the hospital should be guarded against. The profession and the hospital cannot give the public the type of service it deserves when fee-splitting is practiced."

Dr. Porter suggested that the health offices of any city and county can be operated within the hospital at a savings to taxpayers and with greater results in the way of health conditions in the community.

Following a dinner which preceded the public meeting in the ballroom of the hotel, Dr. Carl W. Sawyer complimented Dr. T. E. Sonnanstine, safety director under whose supervision the hospital functions, Dr. F. E. Mahla and Dr. H. K. Mouser for their efforts and perseverance in making it possible for Marion to come up to the requirements of the American College of Surgeons.

"Marion is hitting a national stride in the health work of its community by joining hands with hospitals all over the country and measuring up to the requirements of an organization, the American College of Surgeons, which sets hospital standards for the nation," Dr. Sawyer said.

Mrs. Sawyer, head of the Women's Hospital board, explained what the board had accomplished in its two years of work.

Dr. T. E. Sonnanstine, safety director, praised the loyalty of the Marion Academy of Medicine and his own hospital organization for their loyalty and help in improving the standards for the institution.

During the public meeting, the Colonial quartet, consisting of Mrs Karl Schell, Mrs. Eugene Moore, Mrs. R. O. Bresler, and Miss Dora Jacobs, entertained with southern melodies. A string trio made up of Miss Melvina Summers, piano, T. R. Evans, violin, and Ira halt, cello, entertained during the dinner.

MAGNESIA DEPOSITS FOUND BY DRILLERS

Samples of Mineral from Morrow County Sent to State Assayers for Test.

Special to The Star

MT. GILEAD, June 19 — In the course of drilling for gas on the Levering farm near Chesterville valuable magnesia deposits have been found, operators announced today. Even though gas is not found the magnesia deposits will make the drilling successful Samples of the mineral have been sent to the office of the state assayer at Columbus for a report on the quality which from outward appearance is very good.

The well has been sunk to a depth of 1,700 feet during the last two weeks and the drillers state that unless unforeseen obstacles appear or gas or oil is struck soon the well will be sunk several hundred feet more. No trace of gas or oil has yet been found. The drillers have been working in a limestone for several days and this rock is so hard to get through that progress downward has been limited to 20 feet a day.

Several thousand more acres of farm lands have been leased for prospective drilling. Geological surveys indicate that there is every reason to expect that producing wells can be drilled in the district which lies only a short distance away from a producing district in Knox county. H. E. Perkins of Mt. Vernon is the promotor of the district. He has between 5,000 and 6,000 acres under lease at this time.

CHAPTER 17
"Take Your Choice"

"A [illegible]RY pretty scene," Bruce [illegible]aimed. He was angry, [illegible]olled himself because at [illegible]ent he did not wish to an[illegible] Pierre.

[illegible] and Ann drew apart a lit[illegible]sed: not so much from [illegible]g of guilt, but more be[illegible] Bruce's tone and manner. [illegible]d there's no movie cam[illegible]" Bruce continued, com[illegible] forward. "Other man's [illegible]ng lover a fond farewell. [illegible] laughed.

[illegible]barrassed Pierre protest[illegible] Bruce, what's the matter [illegible] don't be foolish. Ann [illegible] only just—"

[illegible] interrupted him. "Sure, [illegible] only just — I could see [illegible] myself. Honestly, I don't [illegible] my wife is ever going to [illegible] without her little play[illegible] who will mother poor [illegible]d advise him about his [illegible]nderstand and appreciate [illegible] he is far away from his [illegible] Ann?"

[illegible] without speaking, was [illegible] her husband doubtfully. [illegible]empted to hide his em[illegible]ent by burlesquing the [illegible] frightened lover. As he [illegible] the archway opening into [illegible] Bruce called: "What's [illegible], Pierre? Don't go on [illegible] I did not mean to [illegible] on your tender scene; it [illegible] effective, really."

[illegible] whirled and ran hastily up the stairs.

Bruce's laughter alarmed Ann. "Bruce," she exclaimed, "what in the world is the matter with you?"

"There's not a thing the matter with me," he returned grimly, "but I have something to say to you, my lady."

"Yes," retorted Ann coldly. "It must be something very important, judging from your tone."

"It is. I overheard what you said to Pierre just now about his letting me invest his money for him."

Ann drew herself up defiantly. "Well, what of it? You have known all along what I think about your trying to get Pierre's school money away from him. You and father ought to be ashamed of yourselves."

Bruce controlled himself with an effort. "Listen, Ann. I've told you over and over that this Red Butte Nevada, gold mining proposition is my big chance to make a killing and get out of this small-town banking game which will never get me anywhere."

Ann retorted hotly, "And I've told you that you have no right to ask Pierre to let you risk his school money in a business about which you know less than nothing."

"But I do know all about this Red Butte mine."

Ann's only answer was a gesture of hopeless resignation signifying that it was useless to continue such a fruitless argument.

Bruce moved uneasily about, considering whether or not he should tell his wife something which he had so far kept from her. Then he said, "Ann, if I tell you how I know this Nevada mining proposition is all right will you promise you won't tell Pierre?"

Ann was surprised. "Not tell Pierre?"

"Yes—do you promise not to repeat what I say to Pierre?"

She considered a moment, then "Why, yes, Bruce, of course I promise not to tell anybody anything which you ask me not to menton."

"Well, then," said Bruce, "I know all about this Nevada gold mine because it is Roy Donovan who told me about it and wants me to go in with him. Donovan knows the mining game from the ground up. He was born and raised in the West up to the time he went into the theatrical business. And when he quit Pierre's mother and the theater he went back west again into mining."

Ann drew back in amazement. "Bruce! Are you talking about Donovan, Pierre's father?"

"Yes."

"Well, no wonder you don't want Pierre to know who is back of your precious mining scheme. A fine chance you'd have to ever get a penny of Pierre's money for it after the way his father treated his mother when he was a child. Shame on you, Bruce Carey!"

"Now you look here, Ann, it's true enough that Donovan left Pierre and his mother flat and has never been heard of by them since, but don't forget that he was my stepfather and that even after my mother died he continued to take care of me as if I were his own son."

Ann returned indignantly: "And don't you forget, Bruce Carey, that when Roy Donovan married Harriet Noel she mothered you as if you were her own boy, and that even after her own son, Pierre, was born she treated you as if you and Pierre were brothers. You talk about this man Donovan being like a father to you! You owe a thousand times more to Pierre's mother! I know because Father Tony Latour has told me all about it."

"Leave that old fool Tony, out of this, will you?" growled Bruce. "If it hadn't been for him you and I'd have had this deal cinched long ago."

"Do you mean to tell me, Bruce, that all these years that you have been growing up here in Orchard Hill you have known where Roy Donovan was?"

"No, I never heard from him after he quit the theater and I came to live in Orchard Hill, until he wrote me about this mine."

Ann returned thoughtfully: "I see your precious stepfather evidently knows about this money Pierre received from his mother's will on his twentieth birthday, and figures that he can get hold of it through you. I'm sorry I promised you I wouldn't tell Pierre."

"I suppose you wouldn't believe that Roy Donovan really wants to do something big for his own son, Pierre, and for me?"

"No, Bruce, I couldn't believe that."

"And you still refuse to help me persuade Pierre to let me invest his money for him?"

"I certainly do, Bruce—more than ever, after what you have told me. Are you so crazy for money that you have lost all sense of what is honorable?"

"All right. Now listen to what I've got to say. No man can do big things without his wife's help. You have no ambition either for yourself or for me. You would be content to have me a bank clerk here in Orchard Hill the rest of my life, just like your mother and you kept your father down all his life. You would saddle me with a raft of kids before we could afford an automobile! It may be all right for you—you have never known anything but this damned hick town, but I wasn't born here and I don't intend to spend my life here. I've had just about all I can stand of Pierre and his career, and his dead mother's influence, and your sentimental mooning over him.

"Pierre loves you. He loved you before I married you. But he gave you up for his art just as his mother before him gave up Antonio Latour. Pierre would do anything you asked him, and if I lose this chance to make a stake it'll be all your fault. You can take your choice: persuade Pierre to let me use his money, or I'll cut the whole works and strike out for myself. If you don't play with me I'll play a lone hand."

"Bruce, Bruce, you're crazy! You wouldn't—you couldn't—"

Bruce continued relentlessly: "It's not like I was trying to steal Pierre's money. I'm proposing merely to invest it in such a way that it'll make big returns for him and put me on my feet at the same time."

"But Pierre's plans! His education for the stage! His career!"

"Oh, rot! I tell you I only need this money for a year! But there's my proposition—take your choice!"

Ann's reply was prevented by Pierre who appeared running down the stairs.

Upon entering the room, Pierre could not help seeing that there was trouble between the husband and wife. Bruce, hard, cold, calculating, looked from Ann to Pierre and from Pierre back to Ann. Ann, trying to hide her tears, could not speak. Pierre, embarrassed, uneasy—fearing that he might be the cause of their quarrel—looked from one to the other in boyish uncertainty.

Jubilee's Pardner
• • •
A Story of Boyhood Adventure
BY JUDD M. LEWIS

WHEN me and Jubilee woke up this morning I got to thinking about the poor snake the snapping turkle killed, and I thought it was a mean trick to play on a snake. It is too bad that a snake has not got any friends just because it is a snake, which it can't help being, and it wasn' being so offal nice to the snapping turkle either. Before I got up I tried to think of something nice I could do that my grandfather would notice, because he said maybe he would take me and Younias and Feeble and Maggie to the circus and the circus will be Monday, and all I have got is two bits that I have been carrying around till I have got sick of looking at it and would like to spend it for something, but even if I don't have to spend it for the circus the Fourth of July is almost here and I will need it for that.

I bet a fella that is rich don't have much fun. He has to watch and he has to watch out that other people don't get it and [illegible] being poor don't make a fella laugh himself to death either. But I have about made up my mind that I won't be rich when I grow up I will buy me a bicycle and a pocket full of all day suckers and then I will go down the street riding my bicycle and with the stick of an all day sucker sticking out of each corner of my mouth and I'll be poor but happy.

I forgot about the snake and got up and let Jubilee down, and when I came in from milking the cow, Annabelle Lee was in the kitchen and she wanted a drink, so I gave her a dipper of water and then when I had strained the milk I took the dipper from her and I was supprized because it was empty. I thought she must have been offal thirsty. Then just before we sat down to breakfast my grandfather came from his room and stuck his foot into his shoe and was going to pull it on, but his shoe was full of water. He said the kind of a word my mother don't like to have me listen to, and then he said, "Thomas Aristides, I think that was a very unkind act." I said, "Yessir." He said, "Then why did you do it?" Then I told him I had gave Annabelle Lee a dipper of water to drink and she must have done it. Then he laughed and everyone thought it was a cute and bright thing to do. I said just for that we wouldn't take her to the circus, and my grandfather said, "That's so, we're going to the circus, aren't we?" And just then Feeble and Maggie and Younias came in and Feeble told him she wanted to sit next to him so he could tell her about the animals. He told her that my ant wants to sit next to him and my ant said she would rather set next to the boyconstructor. He said the cruelty to animals people wouldn't permit that. She said she wasn't going anyhow.

"Heart of a Wife"
BY ADELE GARRISON

Lillian Appoints Herself Director.

LILLIAN'S answer to my tremulous question as to what was keeping Katherine was so elaborately careless that it confirmed by conviction of some secret understanding between them. That it concerned the work which I was trying to do on the third act of my play before Philip Veritzen should arrive on the morrow, I was equally sure.

"She's probably decided she ought to take a look at the baby before she comes back," she said.

I was silent for I knew that this was a preposterous premise. Katherine, a most competent and experienced nurse, does not believe in disturbing th rest of tiny babies—or larger ones—by popping in on them at frequent intervals to see if they are all right. I knew that Katie was sitting on the little veranda outside Katherine's room, enjoying the moonlight and ready to call one of us if Faith should so much as whimper.

"Here she comes now!" Lillian's tone was the perfunctory one which heralds entrances. "Katrina, what ever have you been doing? Madge has been imagining everything, from colic attack on Faith's part to a fall down the cellar stairs for yours."

"It's very simple," Katherine said lightly as she set down the box of figurines. "I couldn't find this drafted thing. Somebody had pushed it back under a lot of other things."

"Mother Graham, no doubt," Lillian said, smuggly. "She probably had a spell of putting things to rights while you two were away."

Again my brain clicked disbelief, although her conjecture concerning my mother-in-law held more of probability than the one about Katherine and the baby. But it was not until Katherine took the cover from the box of figurines and handed it to me that I comprehended the kindly ruse of my friends.

Ten Minutes to Go

For my "uncanny memory" was functioning perfectly. I had a very clear picture of those doll actors when I had put them away. They had been dressed in the costumes required by their roles, for I had not realized how long it would be before I should touch them again. Katherine, during the minutes at which I had wondered, had undressed them, and put the clothing away neatly in the "wardrobe room" which was a part of the miniature theater.

This then, had been the reason for the signal which I was sure had passed between them when Katherine went out of the room! Both women knew in what a blue funk I was over the writing of this third act, and they were counting upon the distraction which the dressing of the dolls would afford me, hoping that I would "snap back to normaley," Lillian's favorite parody on the famous phrase.

"Do me a favor, Lady, please!" Lillian went down on one knee before me in a burlesque appeal. "Let me be great big director of this here thing, allee samee old Phil himself, for an hour or two."

"If you can direct an idea or two into my so-called brain, that is all I ask." I rejoined.

She rose to her feet and tapped me lightly on the head.

"It isn't so solid as you imagined," she said with the air of one weighing a question. "And I didn't hear an echo, so it isn't absolutely empty. I have distinct hopes of you if you'll follow directions blindly. Now, then, everybody, your attention, please!"

She looked at the figurines still in the box, and made a wildly impatient gesture.

"None of you are dressed for your roles!" she exclaimed. "Didn't you understand that this was to be a dress rehearsal?" She took out an imaginary watch and consulted it. "You have ten minutes," she announced, severely. "Anyone not back here completely ready for rehearsal will be fined."

She put back the watch, and turned to us briskly, changing her tone.

"We wardrobe mistresses have our job cut out for us," she said, "to get these all dressed and set out in position for the raising of the curtain on the first act."

She snatched a figure from the box and held it out to me.

"Is this Cuthbert or Percy?" she said, voicing the names which we had playfully given to my characters when I was in the throes of the first writing and found it hard to choose the names. I had used them ever since, even when I had found the names I wanted, and written them down in my formal script.

"Cuthbert," I answered. "This is Percy." I took another doll from the box, feeling my spirits indefinably lightened by her foolery, and the quick movements of brain and hands which her plan was imposing upon me.

"Give Ethelberta to Katherine," Lillian directed, and then we set frantically to work, dressing the figurines, setting the tiny stage for the first act, and putting the doll actors in the wings ready for their entrances.

"Three seconds ahead of time!" Lillian turned in mock triumph to an imaginary figure in the doorway. "That's the time we scored on you, Mister Philip Veritzen!"

She broke off with widened eyes as a familiar note from an expensive musical auto horn sounded at the farmyard gate.

"I'm not so sure," she said, as we all three sprang to our feet, listening tensely.

Actress Urges Instruction in Baby Training for All Mothers

CAGO — Helen Hayes, the actress whose baby was "an act of God," has been advice to other, less public mothers.

Parenthood, she says, should be separate profession and should attempted only after a period thorough, compulsory training. feel that every mother should specialized training in the of babies," states Miss Hayes, appeared here recently in Influence."

The "act of God" infant, Mary, now more than fourteen months old, is getting expert attention, according to Miss Hayes and her husband, Charles MacArthur, co-author of the "Front Page."

Mary's birth stopped the play, "Coquette," in which Miss Hayes was starring. When other members of the cast sued Jed Harris, the producer, for their salaries, Harris said he could not fulfil the contracts because an "act of God" had intervened.

"Without specialized study, I would not think of caring for Mary myself," says Miss Hayes. "All her life she has been under the care of a competent nurse.

"I know many mothers will criticize me, arguing that only a mother can care properly for a child. This may be true for primitive women, but we have become so civilized that mother nature simply can't get to us.

"Besides, in an age when we spend long years of training to be doctors, lawyers or actresses, why should we think the mere process of bringing children into the world should automatically fit us to minister to their physical needs?"

Four cardinal sins of which many parents are guilty, in Miss Hayes' opinion, are:

Injuring a child's physical and mental development through ignorance of proper upbringing.

Pushing children at a rate beyond their natural mental progress.

Talking "down" to children. "Baby talk probably disgusts even babies."

Mistaking vanity for maternal solicitude.

"Mentally Dead" Parents Blamed for "Wild" Youth

By International News Service

DENVER—"Mentally dead" parents are responsible for much of the criticism of modern youth, according to Dr. William H. Smiley, veteran Denver educator.

"The youth of today," he said, "are better poised and more agreeable to get along with than fifty years ago. I find inspiration in a gathering of modern girls and boys.

"Much of the criticism against them today is made by parents who are alive physically and walking about the streets, and they have ceased to grow mentally."

MAKE Strawberry Jam IN 12 MINUTES!

Mrs. B. G. Fearnow, winner of 12 prizes, including 8 firsts at the 1930 Virginia State Fair, never took a prize with her jams and jellies until last year. "I used Certo for the first time last year. It made me a State Fair Winner"!

Follow this amazing short-boil way that reduces actual boiling time to one minute. Saves 2½¢ on every glass you make. Gives better tasting jam. Plenty of good fruit now on the market.

STRAWBERRY JAM . . . . delicious tasting, flavorful strawberry jam . . . made in less than 12 minutes! This is the season to make it.

Impossible as it seems, any woman can accomplish this now—no matter how limited her jam-making experience may have been. Certo and the Certo recipes make this magic possible!

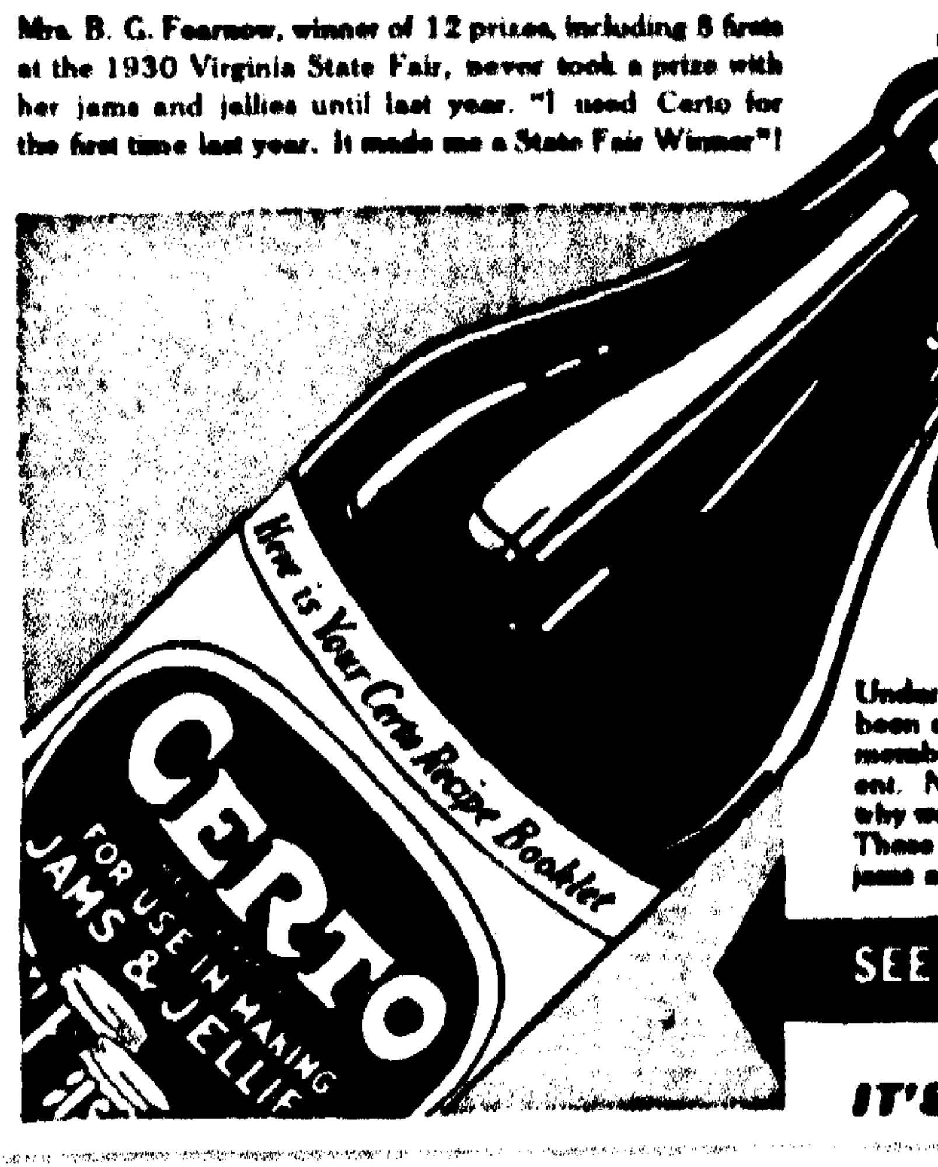
With Certo, you see, only one minute's boiling is required. A few minutes to bring to a boil, add Certo, boil one minute . . . and your jam is done. In 12 minutes it is child's play to have it cooling in the window.

Because of the one-minute boil no fruit juice boils away! As a result you usually get half again more glasses from the same amount of fruit. Often you save 2½¢ on every glass.

And Certo eliminates the chance of costly failures. If you follow directions, your jam will have a fuller flavor and a daintier texture than you've ever known before.

Put up strawberry jam. Put up strawberry jelly, too. With Certo it is easy.

Certo is a pure fruit product—a concentrated fruit pectin. And pectin, you know, is the substance in fruits which makes jelly "jell." Certo is a product of General Foods Corporation. At all grocers.



Here is Your Certo Recipe Booklet
CERTO
FOR USE IN MAKING JAMS & JELLIES
93 RECIPES GIVEN:

Under the Certo label you will find 93 recipes. Each has been carefully worked out for use with Certo. Please remember that in making jam and jelly every fruit is different. No one recipe can be made to fit them all. That is why we developed definite scientific recipes for each fruit. These 93 recipes are your absolute guarantee of perfect jams and jellies with any fruit you care to use.

Mystery Envelops Origin of Mansfield's Winding Caverns

By The Associated Press

MANSFIELD, O., June 19—Deep beneath the business district of Mansfield lie underground chambers, the history of which is almost forgotten.

Today mushrooms grow where once the feet of slaves are said to have trod. In a day not so far removed old-fashioned beer was aged in the tunnels.

Two stories are current to explain the origin of the winding caverns. One is that an old brewery dug the tunnels in which to age beer; the other that they were used for the underground slave trade.

Histories of this section show that shortly after the Civil war the tunnels were mentioned as having been used as a section of the underground railroad for transportation of slaves from the South to the North.

Few persons have gained access to the tunnels, which today are being used by M Frank & Son to grow mushrooms. Some time ago the owners started an experiment of cultivating mushrooms in the caverns and it is said to have been a very decided success.

The tunnels start under an old brewery foundation and extend to an angle from the building to the business section of Mansfield, a distance of several blocks. There are said to be two tunnels—few know because few are admitted to the underground passageways. To reach them it is necessary to go down from the brewery basement—down dark, moist stairs and ladders. Those who have gained entrance say the mushrooms grow in tiers along the tunnel walls.

Interesting speculation is rife as to the original use of the tunnels. That they actually exist is an established fact. But what they were built for some 85 years ago remains a mystery.

SHE WAS ALWAYS LEFT BEHIND

SHE NEVER seemed to have the pep that the other girls had. Nor was she so good-looking either. Her complexion was sallow. Wrinkles had appeared —years too soon. Little wonder that men found excuses when her name was mentioned.

What a pity that so many girls lose beauty so soon . . . very often caused by the poisons of constipation. This could be prevented, easily, pleasantly . . . by eating a delicious cereal.

Two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, eaten daily, are guaranteed to prevent and relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. In severe cases, use with each meal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN sweeps the intestines clean of all poisonous wastes. How much better than taking habit-forming pills and drugs.

Serve Kellogg's ALL-BRAN with milk or cream, fruits or honey added. Use for making fluffy bran muffins, breads, omelets, etc. Look for the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. The largest-selling All-Bran.

FAMED DIRECTOR

Paul Whiteman, famous orchestra leader, will be heard in a series of programs each Friday night from 9 to 9:30. The time of the program has been set at the latter hour for the benefit of those who are unable to hear early programs.

Paul Whiteman To Open New Program Friday

By Brush-Moore Leased Wire.

RADIO listeners who enjoy Paul Whiteman and his orchestra and heretofore have been unable to hear his program because of the early hour at which he went on the air, will now be afforded the opportunity of hearing his broadcasts.

Whiteman and his famous organization will be heard over WLW and the NBC network each Friday night from 9 to 9:30. This program will replace June brides.

Whiteman's feature Friday night will be "Meet the Boys." The new series of broadcasts is being sponsored by a Chicago paint firm.

* * *

Crew racing enthusiasts will be given a minute description of the Yale-Harvard varsity race on the Thames river over leading broadcasting chains, starting at 7 p. m.

Ted Husing, sports announcer, will describe the annual meet for WABC-CBS over a coast-to-coast network.

The NBC-WJZ listeners will hear the race from four announcers. Paul Dumont at the start, Robert Harron from the observation train, George Hicks from atop the training tank tower which the U. S. Navy maintains on the river, and Graham McNamee who will describe the finish from the grandstand.

* * *

The "Chocolateers" program which is heard every Friday night over the NBC network, will be cancelled this week, to permit broadcasting of the Yale-Harvard crew racing. They will go on the air again next week.

* * *

Friday at 10 p. m. the WTAM players will present a dramatic version of "Barnum Was Right" from "The Life of P. T. Barnum," under the direction of Warren Wade.

* * *

FEATURE SPORTS TOMORROW

When the cream of the country's horseflesh starts in the 23rd running of the $50,000 American Derby at Washington Park, Ill., Saturday afternoon, three NBC announcers will draw word pictures of the event. The race is scheduled to be broadcast over WLW.

Preliminary to the race a review of the contenders from the paddock and a description of the colorful crowds will be given. It is planned to have the jockey and owner of the winner speak to the radio audience during the presentation of the purse.

Carried as easily as an overnight bag, a toilet outfit of French invention includes a tank from which water can be drawn through a spigot pulled out to project a few inches.

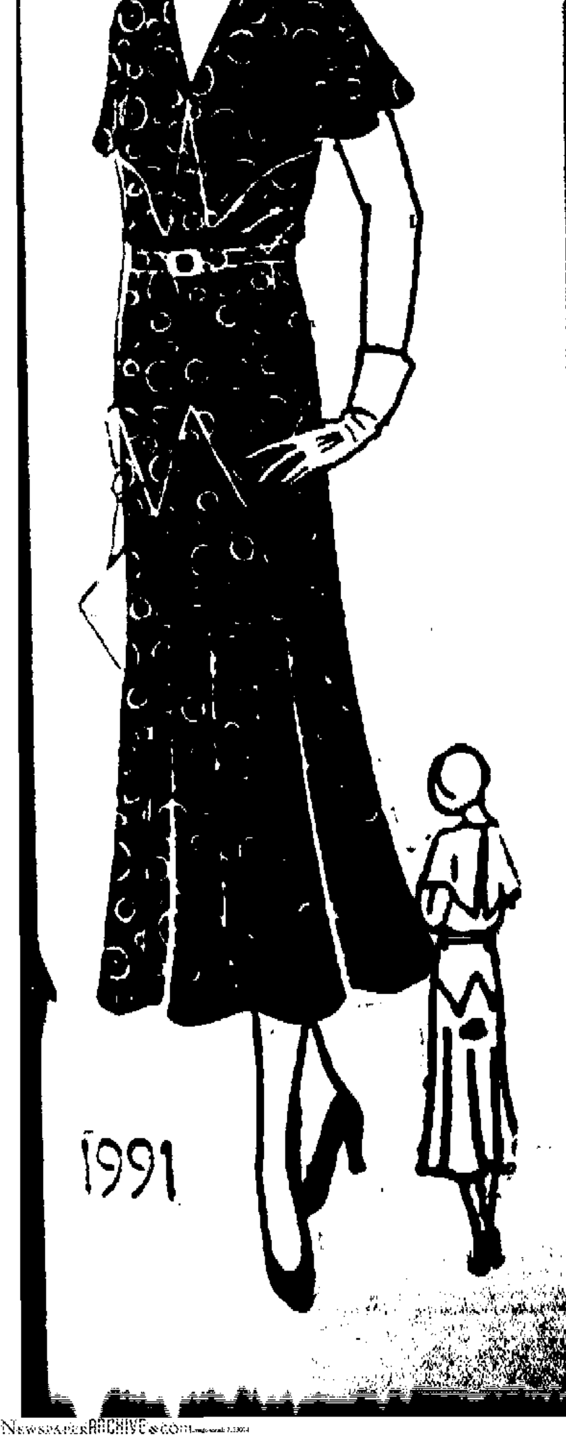
Practical and Simple

Dark Grounds Are Smart.

Pattern 1991

Here's a delightful and practical frock for summer weather, and one that won't soil so readily. Perhaps that is why dark grounds are so very popular this season in the sheer crepes, georgettes, chiffons, voiles and dimities. The favorites are brown, skipper blue, navy green, red, and black with white or pastel prints. Of course, the model would be equally smart in light colors as the pointed details of collar and skirt are slenderizing and extremely becoming. Sleeves are included with Pattern 1991.



Obtainable only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 4⅝ yards of 39 inch fabric for a sleeveless dress.

No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins carefully wrapped, or stamps, for each pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE WANTED.

COUPON

OUT OF KING'S LIFE

With her hair dyed jet black and her name altered to Helena Stanescu, Magda Lupescu (above), friend and consoler of King Carol of Rumania during his days of exile in Paris, has returned to the French capital and is reported to be out of the king's life forever. Since Carol has promised several times to give up the beautiful young Jewess, who separated the king and his wife, Helen, but never did it, many are skeptical that Carol's private romance is ended.

The Stars Say—

For Saturday, June 20

ACCORDING to the lunar transits on this day there should be memorable events and quite unforeseen occurrences. These may react in a sudden change of environment and associations which may have an important bearing on the future life and activities. Advancement or preferment in employment are among the probabilities, with increased financial stability and fulfilled ambitions.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate an eventful and and memorable year with the prospect of sudden change of environment and interests, having a far-reaching influence on the future life and projects. Advancement, recognition, financial stability and attained goals are foreshown, despite petty personal annoyance.

A child born on this day should be skilful, inventive, adventurous and independent. It should attain a stable and noteworthy place in life through its own ingenuity nad personal prestige.

SHOVEL CLUB TO PLAY BELLEFONTAINE HERE SATURDAY

MORRAL, MARION IN TWIN BILL SUNDAY AT LINCOLN PARK

Prospect and Delaware To Furnish Opposition in Rural Community League Games.

THE Marion Steam Shovel company vs. Bellefontaine, Marion vs. Delaware and Morral vs. Prospect. This is the baseball menu that awaits diamond partisans of this locality over this week-end. The first named game, between Central Ohio league entries, will be played at 3 p. m. Saturday afternoon at the Steam Shovel Athletic field. The second two, between entries of the Rural Community league, will be played as a doubleheader Sunday afternoon at Lincoln park, starting at 12:30 p. m.

There is no doubt but what there will be plenty of interesting baseball provided in these three games. All three of the local teams are well up in the standings of their respective leagues and are fighting to keep close to the top. (Morral is listed as a local team inasmuch as it plays all of its home games on the Lincoln park diamond.) The Steam Shovel has lost but one game in five starts while the other two have done nearly as well.

Bellefontaine Tough

Bellefontaine is bringing an aggregation to Marion Saturday that will tax the Shovel nine to the utmost. A number of the Bellefontaine players are well known here, having performed here in former years on local outfits. Richardson, who pitched for the crack team managed by Francis Bacon last summer, will occupy the mound for Bellefontaine. Richardson enjoyed good success on the mound for Bacon last year and is going good this year, it is reported. Other players who have toiled on local diamonds in the past and who will play here Saturday for Bellefontaine are Rowan, Preon, Wilgus, Pine and Simmons.

The Shovel has a good lineup ready to oppose this bunch of satellites and a bitter battle is likely to result when they cross bats on the Shovel diamond.

Double Bill Looks Good

The double header bill at Lincoln park Sunday should prove a mecca for baseball fans for two well-played games are in prospect. Manager McIntire of Morral has named Harold Fetter, a southpaw to take the mound for his team but who will oppose him for Prospect has not been announced. McIntire will do the backstopping for Morral. Morral at present enjoys a higher standing in the circuit than does the Marion county aggregation but does not stand more than an even chance to submerge the Prospect nine.

In the other game of the Sunday afternoon twin-bill Marion's entry in the Rural Community circuit will clash with Delaware and the local team will be favored to come out ahead. The battery for Marion will probably be the same as has taken the field for the last couple of starts, Mougey on the mound and Edgington behind the plate.

The first game is slated to get under way at 12:30; p. m. with the second contest following as soon as the first is out of the way.

Hagan Shoots 68 To Lead Field in Western Open

BY JAMES L. RENCK

Associated Press Sports Writer

MIAMI VALLEY CLUB, DAYTON, O., June 19—The Haig is back!

Sir Walter, the master shot of a few years ago, but uncrowned in the past two seasons, came back yesterday in the first round of the Western Open championship to shoot a sizzling 68, leading the field of more than 100 at the end of the first day's play.

It was in this same tournament 16 years ago that Hagen flashed upon the golfers world with the then sensational score of 286. Three more years the Western crown rested on the brow of the Detroit shot maker, and on two other occasions he was runner-up.

Yesterday the old master attracted his usual gallery, but was erratic on the first nine, hitting a galleryite at the first tee and was away to a bad five, but Hagen stuck to his guns, although at times they refused to shoot. He finished the first nine in 36 strokes, one over par.

But at the tenth hole Sir Walter started to display his old time form, burning up the Miami Valley fairways and greens to come home with a dazzling 32, four under par.

Hagen's score allowed him to hold a one-stroke lead over Ed Dudley of Wilmington, Del., who slipped in with a 69 late in the afternoon.

Two other par shattering rounds were turned in during the first round. Charles Garringer, of Indianapolis and Olin Dutra of Long Beach, Calif., were tied for third place with cards of 70, one under perfect figures.

Gene Sarazen, defending champion, was forced to share the next place with Lew Waldron of Celina, Ohio, and Gene Marchi of Dayton each carding par.

BY BOB KIRKPATRICK

Having a ball player hanging around the lineup that is capable of stepping up to the plate when the count is deadlocked in the last inning and slamming the ball out of the park for a home run is a big help to any ball club. The Erie Roundhouse is convinced of this fact today, now that "Fido" Robbins wallopd one out for a homer yesterday to break a last inning tie and win an Industrial league encounter with the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad. Robbin's circuit smash in the seventh broke a 3-3 deadlock and gave the Erie nine its third victory of the season to put them in a tie with the Steam Shovel for fourth position in the league standing.

Huber Beats Shovel

While Robbins was doing his little home run act, the Marion Steam Shovel was contributing to the Huber Manufacturing company's cause by peacefully succumbing to the slants of "Mutt" Kellogg and his cohorts to the tune of 5 to 1. The Shovel garnered only five hits off Kellogg in taking its 5-1 beating and two of these rattled off the bat of Roush, Shovel third sacker.

The Susquehanna Silk Mills provided the only upset of the day's schedule by setting the Ohio Fuel Gas company down for a 7 to 5 beating. No scorebook was turned in for the game by the Ohio Fuel manager so the details of the game are not available. Despite the loss yesterday the Gas company retained place standings in the circuit with a percentage of 667.

The C., D. & M. Electricians engaged in some batting practice at the expense of the Fairfield Engineering company yesterday but, unfortunately for Fairfield, the batting practice goes down in the records as a regularly played contest. Fairfield lost—the sixth in succession and the score was 14 to 2. It really should have been labelled a track meet.

Eight Runs in First

The C., D. & M. got off to a flying start against Fairfield in the first inning by banging out four safe hits and bringing in eight runs, three of the runs being the direct result of errors on the part of Fairfield. Two walks in the same inning did their share toward piling up the eight markers.

After the first inning the game was fairly even although Fairfield's hurler, Markley was hit hard all through the game.

The C. & O. railroad jumped into a lead over the Erie, scoring three runs in the first inning but as happens often with the former, the lead was thrown away in the fourth frame. Two errors in the fatal fourth put two men on for Erie and then Glen Price clouted a triple, scoring two. He later scored tying run on an outfield fly and paved the way for the Robbins homer in the seventh that won the game. Robbins was the first and last man up in the seventh. When his bat met the ball there was no doubt what it was going to be. The sphere sailed far over the head of the left fielder and the ball game was over with the score 4-3 for Erie.

Lashey Hurls Well

Tony Lashey pitched a good game for the Steam Shovel but his backing was not of the kind that was afforded "Mutt" Kellogg by the Huber nine and the Shovel today is resting in a tie for fourth place, along with the Erie Roundhouse. Lashey gave up 12 hits but kept them so well scattered that the Huber counted runs in only three innings. Myron Gibson snapped out of his batting slump and pounded out a home run and double for the Huber and Cram connected for his fourth Industrial league triple of the season.

Batteries and score by innings:

Shovel .... 000 100 0—1

Mate Favored To Win Rich American Derby

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, June 19—The twenty-third running of the American derby, Washington Park's $50,000 prize for three-year-olds, will have no championship bearing tomorrow, but it promises to be considerable of a horse race.

With Twenty Grand out of it, A. C. Bostwick's Mate probably will be the favorite, but the rest of the field, which may number as many as seventeen, will come in for plenty of support. Mrs. Katherine Elkins Hitt's Sun Meadow yesterday ran a mile around two turns in 1:41 1-5 pulled up, and won a lot of favorable comment.

CARDS START TOUR BY TAKING 5-4 GAME FROM BOSTON CLUB

Giants Beat Pittsburgh, 3-1; Cubs Split Twin Bill with Brooklyn.

BY GAYLE TALBOT, JR.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

Gabby Street's St. Louis Cardinals have developed an extraordinary faculty for winning ball games with a minimum of effort. Their ability to take advantage of every break, rather than their batting punch, has them three games in front of the National league field today.

For example, the Cards collected only five hits off two Boston pitchers yesterday, while their own curving corps was being nicked for eleven, yet they took the Braves into camp, 5 to 4, in opening their latest eastern tour.

The Giants, meantime continued to win behind great pitching, but they couldn't gain an inch on the flying leaders. Carl Hubbell gave them their sixth successive win at the expense of Pittsburgh, 3 to 1, allowing only six hits and striking out five.

The Chicago Cubs lost ground when they could get no better than an even break in two bouts with the Brooklyn Robins. Dazzy Vance, the veteran speedballer, was his old self in the first game as he turned back the Hornsby clan, 7 to 5. He struck out 11 of them.

Pat Malone took charge of things in the nightcap, letting the Robins down with five scattered hits and blanking them, 8 to 0. Hack Wilson belted his seventh homer in the opener and Rogers Hornsby hit No. 9 in the second.

Don Hurst's big bat and the wildness of Cincinnati's pitchers were prime factors in the Phillies' 5 to 4 victory over Col. Dan Howley's pupils.

The day's festivities were confined to the National league as the four eastern clubs of the American league traveled west.

RED BIRDS CONTINUE DOWNWARD DROP IN ASSOCIATION RACE

Millers Trample Columbu 8-5 in 11 Innings; Colonels Take Lead.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, June 19—The stra of trying to find out what cause his club to slip from a contende for the American Association lead ership clear down to sixth positio during the past two weeks, appea to be making Manager Nemo Le bold of the Columbus Red Bird hard to get along with.

Yesterday, for the second straig day, the umpires deemed it nece sary to ask Leibold to absent him self from the field, as the Re Birds lost to Minneapolis, 8 to in eleven innings. He was accom panied by Coach Fred Hunter, wh aided him in too vigorously pr testing decisions by Umpires Goe and Brown.

Umpires Rue and Reeffer orde ed Leibold from the field Wedne day and sent Pitcher Arch Campbell with him, after they h kicked over a decision in anoth extra inning game, also lost by t Birds.

Louisville bounced back into t leadership by an eleven-inning to 4 victory over Kansas City, wh St. Paul was losing to Toledo, to 7.

The triumph gave Louisville half-game lead over St. Paul.

Sergeant George Connally w hit safely 13 times by the Sain but he was tough in the pinch and emerged with his eleventh v tory of the season.

Milwaukee lost ground by losi a 6 to 3 decision to Indianapolis

L. S. Walker, Quanah, Tex., g er, won the Green Belt associat title by protesting when his op nent moved a bit of paper near ball.

City.

Gentlemen:

I welcome this opportunity to put on record the benefits I have enjoyed from using ZZZ tablets purchased at your drugstore.

About three years ago last September, my physician advised me that my complication of gall, liver and appendix ailments had reached a point that my only hope for recovery rested with the success of a serious abdominal operation. His examinations showed my physical condition to be such that the hope of a successful operation appeared extremely doubtful.

With this discouraging prospect before me, I tried taking ZZZ tablets and have continued them until this time. I feel that I am completely cured of all my gall and liver ailments and am ready to verify this letter at any time and recommend your remedy to any who may inquire.

Yours very truly,
(Signed)
Mrs. J. W. Tucker,
Route 2,
Marion, Ohio.

Mrs. Tucker is not alone in her experience with ZZZ tablets. We have many customers willing to testify to their excellent qualities in cleaning and stimulating a sluggish or ailing liver and gall bladder. One month's treatment in a $3.75 box.

STOCKS DOWN; SALES LIGHT

Oils Show Isolated Strength; Railroad Shares Lose 2 to 4 Points.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, June 19—The stock market continued to give ground today, under the persistent if light sprinkle of selling which has been in progress most of the week.

Isolated strength of the oils, the New York tractions and a few specialties tended to sustain the list during the morning, but offerings increased after midday, and heaviness became the dominant tone.

Rails again were conspicuously soft, with losses of 2 to 4 points or more appearing in Atchison, Union Pacific, New York Central, New Haven, Delaware and Hudson, Cotton belt preferred, and Baltimore and Ohio. Food shares also encountered considerable selling, National Biscuit losing 3. There were numerous recessions of a point or so among prominent industrials and utilities, including U. S. Steel and American Telephone. The advance in the oils was led by a 3-point upturn in Standard of California. Smaller advances in this group were numerous, but Royal Dutch eased.

The improved action of the oil issues primarily reflected Standard of California's increase of 5½ cents a gallon in the price of gasoline, making the price 13½ cents at San Francisco, and the doubling of its buying price for crude oil, making the price 40 cents a barrel.

Over the country at large, petroleum prices are still unprofitable in the main. Although mergers do not thrive in periods of depression, Wall Street feels that consolidation will eventually go far toward stabilizing this important industry.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meat, Grain, Livestock

After an absence of several weeks, sweet corn has again made its appearance on the local markets. Dealers were carrying small supplies today that were selling at from 45 to 50 cents a dozen. The quality is only fair and dealers report buying as light.

Other vegetables are plentiful, dealers are carrying large supplies that are selling at the same prices as yesterday. With the exception of celery which was selling today at 20 and 25 cents a bunch, the highest price in the past year, vegetable prices are below those of last year. The ideal growing season which is being experienced together with the fact that there are many more gardens this year than in many years will do much to keep vegetables prices down, dealers say.

With this week and next witnessing the peak of the strawberry season, dealers are emphasizing berries for canning. Home grown berries are supplying practically the entire demand and are selling as low as two quarts for 25 cents although the majority of dealers are asking from 15 to 20 cents a quart.

A few watermelons were on the market today that were selling at from 90 cents to $1.25. The supply is small and the demand light.

Local Grain Figures Out for Few Days

Due to the grain market situation at this time, with the supply of old wheat virtually gone and no bidding on new wheat, local grain quotations will be omitted for several days. Publication of quotations will be resumed as soon as accurate and dependable figures are assured.

WHEAT SAGS IN LATE SALES

Reports of Heavy Rains in Drouth Area Send Prices Tumbling.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, June 19—Influenced by Canadian reports of all night downpours at some places in drouth territory wheat today underwent fresh breaks to new low price records since 1896. Word of terrific dust storms continuing elsewhere, tended, however, to check setbacks. Opening unchanged to ⅝ cents lower, wheat afterwards sagged all around. Corn started unchanged to ⅝ off and subsequently showed a general decline.

All deliveries of wheat quickly outdid yesterday's bottom quotations, the lowest previously this season and in 31 years. Maximum new downturns in prices though, were only fractional extent, and rallies at times carried the market in some cases to above yesterday's finish. Most of the rain in Canada during the last 24 hours was reported to have been in northern Alberta and northern Saskatchewan, the districts that have suffered least from drouth.

Southern Saskatchewan, western Manitoba and southeastern Alberta, which have been the center of the drouth, were reported to have received little or no moisture relief. Between Davidson and Saskatoon, Sask., indications were for only half a crop at best.

Corn and oats held relatively firm, with trading largely local. Provisions sagged, despite upturns in hog values.
